U. S. Seeks Guarantees Of Martinique

Moscow And London More Confident Of Holding Nazis Down

Interpretation By

Kirke L Simpson

(Wide World War Analyst)

Dramatic war developments in the Indian ocean and the Coral sea have tended to obscure to American eyes a significant change in tone in Moscow and London comment as to the probabilities of the immediate future on the Russian and Libyan fronts.

The long-range importance of the Coral sea naval battle cannot yet be fully assessed.

There is no longer any doubt, however, that Hitler's "victory" offensive in Russia is badly off schedule. Weather conditions even in the Leningrad area, are no longer an insurmountable obstacle to mechanized attack. The snow is disappearing even that far north and the roads are beginning to dry out. Yet there is no sign of the opening of Hitler's promised annihilation drive anywhere along the vast front.

Out of that Russian commentators are increasingly advancing the possibility that Hitler has been beaten to the punch by the Red army's winter offensive. One Moscow radio voice says that "spring is more likely to see a general offensive opened by the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union on all fronts than any particular German offensive."

London assessment of the strategic effect of British occupation of Madagascar island is that it removes the possibility of an Axis offensive of major consequence in Libya in the near future.

An informed British observer is quoted as saying Britain's position in Libya had been "secured for the summer" by the Madagascar coup, Axis failure to snuff out Malta in 2,000 bombing raids, and the steady toll being taken in the Mediterranean of Libya-bound Axis troops and supply ships. The British, he added, are strong enough now on the ground and in the air "to halt anything Rommel (the German general in North Africa) can throw at them.

"Hot weather has started (in Libya) and unless Rommel disregards all rules and attacks a superior force under bad conditions, there will be no (Axis offensive) campaign this summer," he predicted.

The British authority was careful to add that his conclusion did not cover a possible Nazi surge through Turkey to reach oil sources in Iraq and Iran or effect a "juncture" somewhere with Japan. He obvously regarded, however, the Madagascar operation by the British as having made remote the

MOTHER'S DAY TO BE OBSERVED

Many Family Reunions Scheduled; Churches To Note Occasion

Mother's day will be observed in the Twin Cities today as it is observed throughout the United States. Many family reunions are scheduled and mothers will be the recipient of many gifts from loyal children who realize that in her is their best friend regardless of what may happen.

As is the custom, a white carnation or other flower of that color, is to be worn in the lapel for a mother who has passed on; while a red carnation or other flower will designate a mother who is living.

In the churches of the Twin Cities, sermons will be appropriate for the occasion. A special program will be given for the Frank Stubbs Memorial Bible class, at the Paramount theater today at 9:45 a. m. The speaker will be George Snelling, Jr. The public is invited.

"Loyalty," a Mother's day message, will be given at the First Methodist church by the pastor, Dr. A. M. Freeman, at 11 a. m. "Motherhood at Its Best" will be the theme of Rev. L. T. Hastings at the First Baptist church, this morning.

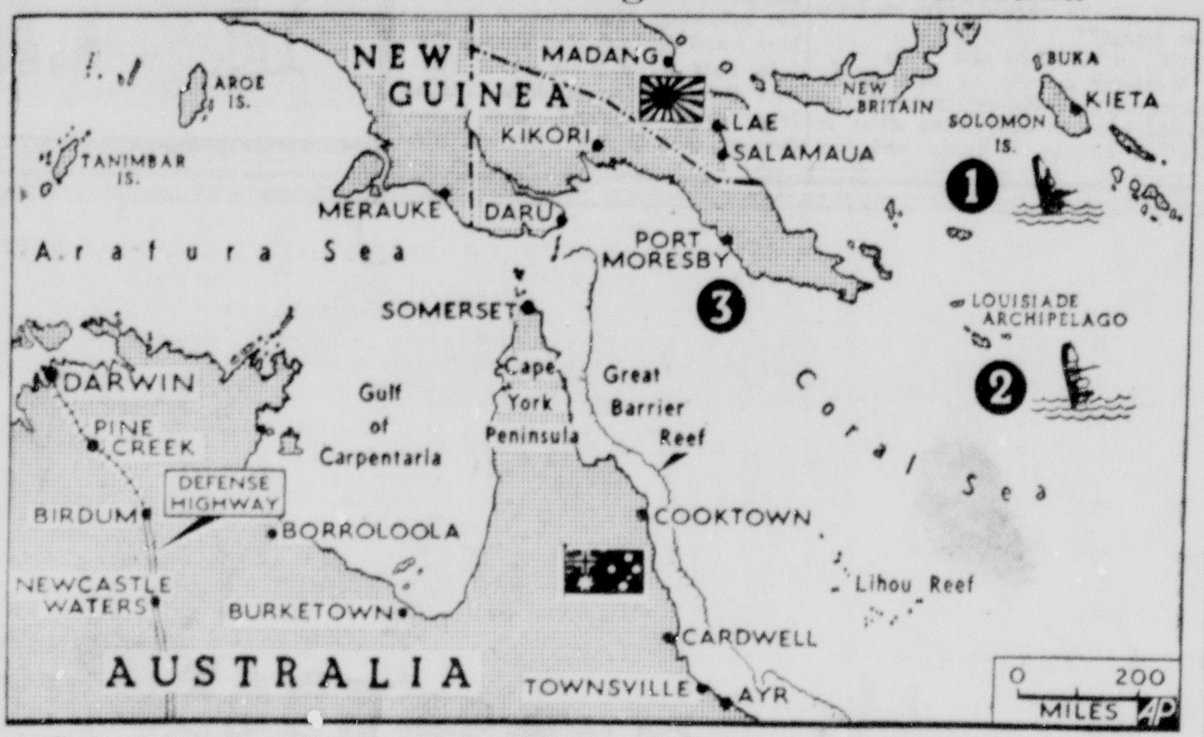
PARISH ELECTION SET FOR TUESDAY

Qualified electors who own property in Ouachita parish outside of the city of Monroe will cast ballots Tuesday, May 12, in a special election for the levying of a four-mill tax on all property subject to taxation in the Ouachita parish school district for a period of five years beginning with the present year. The money sought is for the financing of the parish schools. A similar tax expired in 1941 and the levy is a renewal of a tax that has existed for many years. It will not comprise an additional tax, stated Superintendent T. O. Brown.

The usual voting places will be utilized for the election. Polls will open at 7 a. m. and will close at 5 p. m.

Great Naval Battle Fought East Of Australia



Allied and Japanese warships have engaged in the greatest naval battle of the war in the Coral sea east of Australia. Allied headquarters said 11 Japanese ships had been sunk and six badly damaged. Reports indicate the battle began near the Solomon islands (1) May 4. Allied bombers were reported to have sunk a Jap transport in the Louisiade archipelago (2) May 7. The presence of Japanese ship near Louisiades indicates a possible thrust at Port Moresby (3), or the northeastern Australian coast (marked by Australian flags). The Japs are based in northeastern New Guinea and New Britain.

Judge Dawkins Urges Action By Legislature On Criminal Code

Says Present 'Hodge-Podge' Of Statutes Should Be Clarified

The proposed new criminal code for Louisiana, to be submitted to the coming legislature by the Louisiana State Law Institute, was described by Federal Judge Ben C. Dawkins as "a great advancement in jurisprudence" and by Dr. J. Denson Smith of the L. S. U. law school as offering the legislature "the opportunity of over a century" to provide modern criminal statutes for the state.

The proposed code was drawn up by the state law institute over the past two years under authority of an act of the 1940 legislature. It represents an effort to give the state a modern system of criminal laws in place of the present system which is basically that of the Crimes Act of 1805, prepared two years after the United States acquired Louisiana.

Since 1805, many efforts have been made to bring legislative action on a new code, but all have failed. New statutes have been passed and old ones amended, but the code itself has remained basically unchanged with the result that many laws contradict and overlap each other.

Both Judge Dawkins and Dr. Smith, who is a director of the state law institute, expressed hope that the legislature would not get into a snarl over individual features of the proposed code, with resulting shelving of it entirely. Both agreed that some "smoothing off" by the legislature may be necessary, but urged that it be done always with the objective of final adoption of a new code at this session of the legislature.

Judge Dawkins was one of several judges called in by the state law institute as advisers in drafting the code.

"I believe that the code is as good as could be expected at this stage," Judge Dawkins said. "It will be a great advancement in jurisprudence

MOTORISTS WILL GET 3 GALLONS

This Amount To Be Allowed For Non-Essential Use In East

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP)—The office of price administration announced today that motorists whose automobiles use is classed as "non-essential" would be allowed three gallons of gasoline a week under the rationing plan beginning May 15 in Eastern seaboard states.

The decision to make three gallons the basic rationing unit was reached, OPA said, on the basis of supply figures furnished by Petroleum Coordinator Ickes.

There have been some indications that Ickes and his aides did not believe such short rations were necessary.

Meanwhile, W. R. Boyd, Jr., chairman of the petroleum industry's war council, announced that a program had been worked out for relocating existing pipelines and extending others. These changes, when combined with transportation of oil by barges and tank cars, would increase the daily amount of crude oil and products delivered to the East to a total of 700,000 to 900,000 barrels a day, exclusive of ocean-going tanker delivery.

He asserted, however, that even this total figure was below the 1,265,000 barrels a day estimated as the minimum essential supply and added that a new pipe line, sufficiently large to supply the shortage, was the only answer. The pipeline committee of the council, he said, therefore recommended construction of a 24-inch line from the East Texas area, through Salem, Ill., to the New York-Philadelphia refining area. Construction of such a line would require about a year, he estimated.

Of changes in existing pipelines, Boyd said that one line starting in the Baton Rouge, Louisiana, area, would have its flow increased 50 per cent

ACCUSED SOLDIER IS SHOT TO DEATH

HATTIESBURG, Miss., May 9.—(AP)—Corporal Raoul J. Bernard, 25, of Carencro, La., was shot and killed today by military police when he tried to escape while being placed in an automobile to be taken to Houston, Tex., to face a murder charge in the tourist camp slaying of a Houston nurse.

Colonel George M. Halloran, base camp commander, said the prisoner, who was arrested in bed here yesterday, attempted to escape and was shot by the military police. He declined further comment.

Bernard, attached to the medical detachment of the station complement, was charged with murder in the shooting of Mrs. Martha Elizabeth Daily, 29, whose body, attired in a pink nightgown, was found in bed in a Houston tourist court at noon Tuesday.

Deputy Sheriff Jake Colca and District Attorney's Investigator Ted Walsh from Houston were putting Bernard in their car when he broke to run. They fired no shots.

CHENNAULT MONEY TO GO TO CHINESE

NEW ORLEANS, May 9.—(AP)—James A. Noe, Democratic national committeeman, today advised the China Relief society that $16,000 to $17,000 recently raised in the state for a bomber for Brigadier-General Claire Chennault would be turned over to the society instead at Chennault's instructions.

"We have raised some sixteen or seventeen thousand dollars on the bomber fund we were working on for General Chennault," Noe advised the committee raising funds for the society.

"However, the general advises me that plans have been completed whereby the American Volunteer Group would be transferred back to the United States army and he suggested that we give our fund to Madame Chiang for the relief of China's widows and orphans, victims of China's five-year fight for the democratic principles of this country.

"This we plan to do."

DUTCH TO NOTE 'BLACK SUNDAY'

Hundreds Of Thousands In Dark Clothes To Meet In Churches

LONDON, May 9.—(AP)—Tomorrow will be a day of memories for the people of Britain, the Netherlands, Belgium, France and Luxembourg.

In the Netherlands it will be "Black Sunday," according to a Dutchman who recently escaped from his German-occupied homeland and reached London. Hundreds of thousands of persons clad in black will gather in churches on that second anniversary of the day the Nazi legions suddenly poured across the frontiers of the Low Countries.

In London, Sunday strollers will gaze at the ruins of famous buildings and humble homes destroyed in the German air force's last and possibly greatest blitz attack on this capital. For it will be the first anniversary of the night that 400 or more Nazi planes rained bombs on the blazing city and defenders brought down a record night total of 33 raiders.

Somewhere in Britain the dark-visaged Rudolph Hess also will recall the day as an anniversary. A year ago the then No. 2 Nazi parachuted from a Messerschmitt fighter plane to Scotland on a mission described as a daring but harebrained attempt to lure Britain into inactivity and leave Germany free to attack Russia.

Again in London, Prime Minister Churchill will broadcast to the people on the second anniversary of his accession as Britain's wartime leader.

And perhaps King George and Queen Elizabeth will remember the day five years ago when the rehearsals were finished and an eager empire awaited their coronation ceremonies two days later.

Finally, in many lands, it will be Mother's Day.

The Dutchman who escaped the Nazis has told a meeting of his compatriots in London about the preparations of their people to observe the invasion anniversary.

The German police chief has forbidden the wearing of orange favors

PARISH IS BEHIND ON BOND SUBSCRIPTIONS

Ouachita parish is behind on its subscription to war bonds so far this month, stated S. Jack Rogers, parish chairman of war bond sales, Saturday. He said that the quota assigned for Ouachita parish this month is $148,600 and that up to the ninth of May, the quota has not been met proportionate for that period.

While some firms are aiding with payroll allotment by their employes, other firms have been slow as have their employes in making response.

He explained that the treasury department is giving the public an opportunity to make this a voluntary proposition, but if responses fall short, that it is probable that legislation will be resorted to by congress, making it obligatory on the public.

Mr. Rogers stated that all loyal Americans should respond even if it entails sacrifice for no war is ever won without sacrifices.

Flag Of France Would Still Fly Over Caribbean Possessions

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP)—The state department announced tonight that an American mission had requested guarantees from the local government of Martinique that that island and other French possessions in the area would not be used by the Axis or in any way become menaces to the United States.

The department declined to answer questions as to what would happen if the request were refused and emphasized that the conversations had already begun in a spirit of all friendliness.

Representing the United States at Martinique are Admiral John H. Hoover, commanding naval officer on the Caribbean sea front, and Samuel Reber, assistant chief of the division of European affairs in the state department.

Their requests were made to Admiral Georges Robert as French high commissioner.

"Admiral Hoover is authorized to propose an arrangement whereby the French flag may continue to fly over the French Caribbean possessions," the department said in a statement, "and French sovereignty there will remain unchanged, and whereby Admiral Robert will continue to be recognized as the ultimate governing authority of French Caribbean possessions.

"Should mutually satisfactory arrangements be reached with Admiral Robert as high commissioner, assuring that the French authorities in the French Caribbean Atlantic coast area will not furnish aid or comfort to Axis forces, the United States is pre-

FRIDAY DEADLINE FOR TAX RETURNS

NEW ORLEANS, May 9.—(AP)—Next Friday is the deadline for filing state income tax returns, it was announced today by Rufus W. Fontenot, state collector of revenue.

All single persons, with net incomes of $1,000 and more, and married persons with net incomes of $2,500, are required to file the returns.

The rates and exemptions have not been changed, Fontenot said. A copy of the federal return must be attached to the state return, he stressed.

Fontenot predicted today that the revenue derived from state income tax returns will be greater this year than that of any previous year.

U-Boat In Gulf Thought Headed By Von Spiegel

NEW ORLEANS, May 9.—(AP)—Standing on the bridge of a German submarine that had just torpedoed their ship, a deeply tanned, shorts-clad officer called out Wednesday to the survivors, "Sorry we can't help you. Hope you get ashore okay."

This farewell in what was described as "perfect American" and other circumstances of the first announced sinking of two ships by U-boats in the well-protected waters of the Gulf of Mexico today brought speculation that Baron Edgar von Spiegel, intrepid, hard-bitten Nazi, had returned to fight the United States in the waters he knows best.

Von Spiegel, former German consul general of the entire gulf coast from Florida to Texas, with headquarters here, commanded a U-boat in the World war and it is recorded that he never sank a ship with loss of life, which earned him the title of "Germany's most chivalrous U-boat captain." The British captured Von Spiegel in 1917.

Although several officers were injured by shrapnel in Wednesday's sinking, announced today, no lives were lost and survivor stories indicated that after their ships were stopped there was a deliberate attempt to let them get off safely before the ships were sunk. They were permitted to proceed with best wishes and without molestation aboard life

CHURCHILL WILL BE HEARD TODAY

British Prime Minister To Explain Latest War Developments

LONDON, May 9.—(AP)—Prime Minister Churchill will broadcast to the world Sunday night (3 p. m. Eastern War Time) to explain the latest developments in the British empire's fight for survival and victory on the second anniversary of his selection as prime minister and the start of the Nazi conquest of the low countries and France.

The prime minister is expected to outline the part millions of Britons will play in the campaign months of 1942 to obtain the "victory at all costs" to which he pledged himself two years ago.

It was predicted that Churchill also would defend the government's fuel rationing scheme, the most hotly debated issue in domestic politics.

Other prime topics for discussion would include the gallant but ineffectual efforts to halt the Japanese in Burma, the Royal Air Force's mighty spring offensive, Britain's swift occupation of Madagascar's vital naval base, and the government's attitude toward the Laval government of Vichy, which ordered the French to resist their one-time allies in Madagascar.

The speech is expected to be more optimistic than the prime minister's

NOVELIST, CRITIC AT L. S. U. RESIGNS

BATON ROUGE, La., May 9.—(AP)—Louisiana State University's student newspaper today reported the resignation from the English faculty of Robert Penn Warren, poet, novelist and critic and attributed his leaving to the university's failure to reward ability.

Warren, who is to become a professor of English at the University of Minnesota, has for eight years been associate professor of English at L. S. U. and an editor of the Southern Review, widely acclaimed literary quarterly being discontinued by the university here.

"Mr. Warren's leaving means that another distinguished man of letters has taken wing in the flight of talent from the South," said the Reveille in an editorial signed by its editor, Jewel Claitor.

"In the last analysis, it is a question of what values are to prevail at this university. It cannot afford the Southern Review, one real claim to fame and greatness, and apparently it cannot afford Mr. Warren. . . When recognized ability goes unrewarded, it is only logical that it should seek greener fields."

CHINESE SMASH 90 MILES FORWARD, TAKE MAYMYO

Turns Fierce Attack On Mandalay, Stilwell Advances On Lashio

By Richard McMurray
(Associated Press War Editor)

A crippled Japanese armada limped desperately away from Nippon's greatest naval defeat last night but even in the flush of victory, the United States and its allies warned that the enemy might return in greater strength to Australia's approaches and attempt to convert his disaster into triumph.

Other heartening news came from Burma where a Chinese force far behind the front lines smashed 90 miles forward to recapture Maymyo and then turned to a fierce attack on devastated Mandalay. A Chungking communique said other troops commanded by Lieutenant-General Joseph W. Stilwell, U. S. A., were advancing on Lashio, railhead of the Burma road, threatening the Japanese, who had pushed 50 miles into China, with imminent annihilation.

The Japanese naval force broke off the great six-day battle in the Coral sea, fleeing after the powerful plane-ship teams of the pre-dominantly American forces had sent 11 of the Mikado's ships to the bottom and gravely damaged six others. With the sunken ships were bodies of thousands of Japan's best fighting men, fliers and seamen.

The allies, however, were not yet through. In the words of a communique from General Douglas MacArthur's Australian headquarters, "our attacks will continue."

Japanese claims of sinking a United States battleship and two carriers were flatly denied by the navy department in Washington as well as MacArthur's headquarters which called them "entirely fictional." Allied losses were described officially as "relatively light."

"Reports received in the navy department to date fail to substantiate the loss of any United States aircraft carrier or battleship in that action," the Washington announcement said. Details of damage to United States

DICKARD TO LOSE CONSERVATION JOB

NEW ORLEANS, May 9.—(AP)—John Connor, Administrative assistant to Joseph McHugh, conservation department commissioner, today said that H. E. Dickard, head of the department's mineral division in Monroe, had been notified that his services would not be needed after May 15, and Connor said Dickard would be replaced by Duncan Cook of the Shreveport office.

Asked the reason for Dickard's dismissal, Connor said that announcement would have to come from McHugh, who was reported at his home in Jennings, today. He could not be reached immediately for a statement.

Sources reported that Dickard was an appointee of James A. Noe, who recently broke with Governor Sam H. Jones after a coalition that lasted about two years.

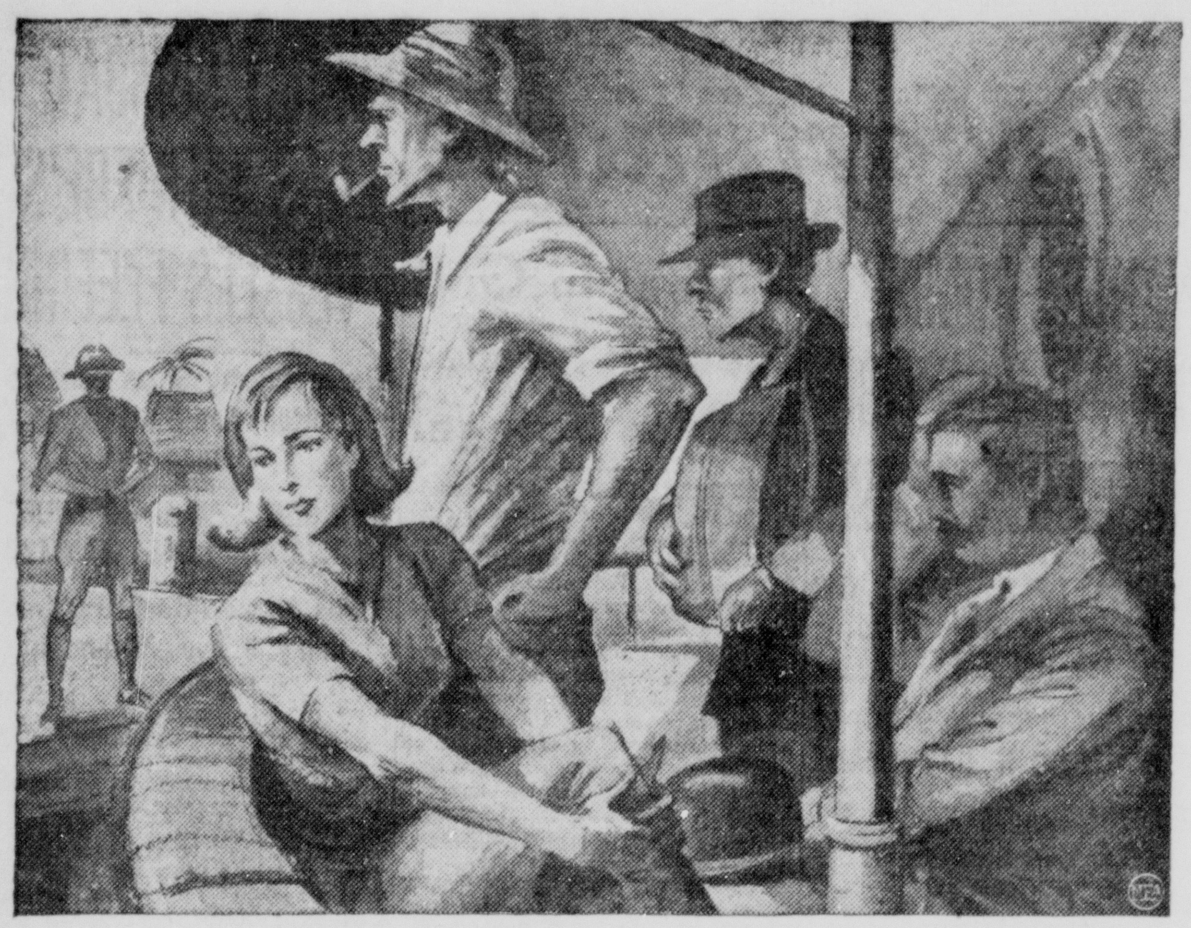
CARIBBEAN CRISIS

BY EATON K. GOLDTHWAITE

COPYRIGHT, 1942, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CHAPTER I

It was a little past noon when the mailboat reached Abas Island and Bill Talcott, who had been up since dawn, noticed with amazement the arrival of four visitors. He had no difficulty in spotting the new man Halsey, a rangy, lantern-jawed individual in his forties, and he guessed that the skinny little fellow with the voluminous briefcase would be the company auditor.



Illustrated by Carol Johnson

Bill Talcott had no difficulty in spotting the new man, Halsey, and he guessed the little fellow would be the company auditor. But the other two, a mustached character and a slender blond girl in plum-colored slacks, were entirely out of place.

But the other two, a mustached character much the worse for the ride across Anegada Passage, and a slender blond girl in plum-colored slacks, were entirely out of place. It was only because the girl was so positive in ordering the transfer of her luggage that Bill Talcott decided she must be a relative of Halsey's who had come along to see him settled in his new home.

"I'm your successor," the rangy man admitted after he had gotten the dock under his feet. "Not surprised you didn't meet us in Saint Thomas. Had no idea it was such a long trip. This is Struthers, the auditor, and Mr. MacDowell."

The auditor's too-heavy clothing gave him the appearance of having been fried in deep fat; he shook hands gravely and opened the briefcase to fuss with credentials. The mustached MacDowell responded with a grunt, mopped beads of sweat from his heavy gray face, and didn't seem to see Talcott's proffered hand.

The girl in the plum-colored slacks was fresh as a zephyr, as coolly unconcerned as a scudding cloud. "I'm June Paterson," she announced, wrinkling her pert nose. "Lowell Byrd's cousin. He cabled that you were expecting to return to the continent. I've been spending a month with friends in Charlotte Amalie and Lowell's afraid I'll go native. You're to look after me."

You could have shouted at Bill Talcott that a shark was swimming within 50 feet of him and he wouldn't have turned a hair. You could have told him that one of the blacks from the nitrate pits had gone crazy with rum and heat and was crouched behind him with a naked machete, and he would have accepted the warning with a grin. But for an attractive young woman to calmly announce that she was delivering herself in his charge—

"Wh-what?" Bill Talcott gasped.

"Aren't you thrilled?" she murmured, lowering her lashes in exaggerated coquette. And then she swept away to organize the confused scampering of houseboys for luggage.

Bill Talcott gaped, wracking his brain to recall Lowell Byrd's cousin. Could this be the kid he'd danced with after the water polo meets at Cornell? Dimly he remembered a lot of arms and legs all wrapped in yards of green silk. It had been a dozen years since he had shared a room with Lowell Byrd in engineering school. Suddenly, because you don't go in for the social niceties after six years on a place like Abas, he became conscious that he had neither shaved nor changed his clothes.

"I suppose you received Winters' cable?" Halsey was saying. "I presume your accounts are in shape for the customary audit?" The new man's critical eye scanned the rocky, barren contour of the island. Already he was fretting in the closeness of the brassy, stifling heat; flaring his nostrils at the smell.

"I'm all set," Talcott said. "We'll go up to the house for a drink. You'll be able to get in a swim before lunch if you like."

Halsey hesitated, a half-smile on his lips, and the sweating little auditor cut in. "Thanks for the invitation, Talcott," Struthers said in a thin voice. "But if you don't mind, Halsey and I will get directly to work. If you'll just show us to the office."

Bill Talcott nodded in mild surprise. Such eagerness to buckle down didn't seem just right, not after a 1,600-mile steamship ride topped off with a night and morning on the jolting mailboat. Still, auditors were creatures of habit more than whim and Struthers seemed set on living up to his role. Shrugging, Talcott pointed to a cluster of galvanized buildings on the ridge and, taking June Paterson and the wobbly MacDowell in hand, he set off along the path to his bungalow.

Tall, frosted glasses appeared, luggage melted from sight, and Talcott relaxed with his guests on the terrace. From comfortable chairs they watched the rustling fronds of royal palms against the trade-wind sky, eyed the antics of a tiny lizard perched on the swaying bough of a flamboyant tree.

June Paterson fidgeted and her eyes glinted hostilely. She sniffed. "From what Lowell told me I expected to find you living in a cave. So you're leaving all this to go in the army?"

"I have to take up my commission," he said, and decided that she was horribly spoiled. He didn't think it necessary to tell her that "all this" included operation of a fertilizer plant. Her uptilted nose must have told her that. He didn't tell her, either, that the population of Abas consisted of tough blacks; that she was the first white woman who had set foot there in more than a year.

The recovering MacDowell filled his mouth with ice and grunted, "Say, it's kinda nice here. This one o' the Virgin Islands?"

Talcott smiled. "No. You're now in the Netherlands, or what's left of them. It's quite a job to keep track of the minor pawns in the strategy of international chess."

"Holland! Gosh!"

Talcott would have liked to ask him his connection with Halsey and Struthers; there hadn't been any MacDowells mentioned in the hectic correspondence with Old Man Winters. But he kept his peace. After six years of sameness a new face, even a close-mouthed one, was welcome. June Paterson supplied the lack with an endless round of questions about the extraction of nitrates, and they were on a fresh round of drinks when Halsey came up the path.

The new man's jaw was grim and his eyes were both puzzled and appraising. "Struthers wants to see you," Halsey said abruptly.

"So soon?" Talcott flushed. "Aren't you fellows in a bit of a rush?"

"I think you'd better go," Halsey said. Again his eyes held swift appraisal, mirroring perhaps incredulous disappointment.

Baffled, Talcott got to his feet. Turning to June Paterson he said, "I trust you will excuse me. The boy will get you anything you need."

The ash-blond girl regarded him with a quizzical smile. "Trouble in paradise," she laughed. "Do we dress for dinner?"

"If you wish," he said coldly.

Whatever concern he held at the strangeness of Halsey's manner was stifled when he entered the office. In its hot interior, Struthers had surrounded himself with books. The auditor's coat was off and his wet shirt clung to his skinny ribs. His eyes were enormous behind thick-lensed glasses, and he sniffed and said, "Talcott, you appear to be short in your accounts by $158,000. I suppose you've got some explanation?"

Newspaper Advertising IN TIME OF WAR!!

"Woven deep in the ways of Democracy is advertising; a bridge between the freedom of people to buy and the freedom of people to sell."

History has proved that in war times people depend on their newspapers even more than ever. They read their newspaper more closely, their lives are guided to a greater extent by this time-honored, long-recognized logical medium for the dissemination of news and molding of public opinion.

Coupled with the above fact is newspaper advertising—that bridge between the buyer and seller that means more today i wartime America than ever before. In the News-Star—World the advertiser is not compelled to make longtime commitment for his advertising; he does not have to obligate himself for any specified sum. He may expand or decrease his advertising t take advantage of events. Your newspaper is geared to give you advertising at the psychological moment for the greates possible degree of effectiveness.

Newspapers and business in general, for the sake of maintaining high morale, must not "let down" in these days of conflict There are days ahead when the restoration to normalcy must find American business ready to meet the issues of peace a valiantly as we have met the issues of war.

DUPUY IS INSTALLED B YDENTAL SOCIETY

LAKE CHARLES, La., May 9.—(AP)—Lieutenant-Commander Larry Dupuy, U. S. N. R., of New Orleans, was installed president of Louisiana State Dental society today and Dr. Walter L. Comeaux of Baton Rouge was named president-elect, to take office a year from now, at the final session of the 62nd annual convention here today.

Dr. Comeaux is also president of the Louisiana state board of dentistry.

Elected to serve with Dr. Dupuy for the coming year were Dr. E. L. Fortier of New Orleans, first vice-president; Dr. J. R. Bass of Lake Charles, second vice-president; Dr. Julian S. Bernhard of Shreveport, reelected to his fifteenth year as secretary; and Dr. O. J. Ory, of Garyville, reelected treasurer for the twenty-ninth consecutive year.

The past president's key was presented to Dr. George J. Mire, retiring president, by Dr. Oscar J. Ory, state treasurer. A total of 838 licenses were issued last year by the state board of dentistry, it was reported by Dr. B. J. Lacour of Welsh, secretary-treasurer, who also presented an extended account of the board's activities.

Local Shoe Repairman Gets Loving Cups For Work In Memphis

Frank Parrino, operating the No-D-Lay Shoe Shop, on North Second street, has returned from Memphis, Tenn., where he received two silver loving cups and a blue ribbon in attestation of his being acclaimed the world's champion shoe repairer.

He was stationed at the Memphis store of Sears, Roebuck and Company, where he was entered in competition with other shoe repairers from all over the United States. His work was unanimously adjudged to be the finest of his competitors.

Mr. Parrino was acclaimed national champion in his line back in 1938.

Because of the shortage of shoes, he says that the work of shoe repairing is going to prove increasingly important as the war goes on. People, he says, will be forced have their shoes repaired instead of buying new ones. And this requires that the work be performed in the best possible manner, he said.

"If there are tacks in the shank of the shoe (at the front of the heel in the instep) then it's an old fashioned job. The modern way is to vulcanize the sole to the top of the shoe. That makes it water-tight. When I half-sole a shoe, you can hardly tell that it isn't a new shoe," Mr. Parrino explained.

NOE AND MAESTRI OPENING OFFICES

Two Establishing Headquarters In Baton Rouge For Session

NEW ORLEANS, May 9.—(AP)—Authoritative quarters here today said that Mayor Robert S. Maestri and former Governor James A. Noe, recent allies in the mayoralty campaign here in opposition to a candidate backed by forces of Governor Sam H. Jones, would establish political headquarters in Baton Rouge tomorrow for the legislative session beginning Monday.

Mayor Maestri has rented a house in the capital reportedly because of his preference not to discuss important matters at a hotel or other public places while associates said Noe had taken suite 734 in the Heidelberg hotel, the late Huey P. Long's old headquarters there during political conclaves.

Mayor Maestri was expected to go to Baton Rouge tomorrow to attend a pre-legislative caucus of Old Regular members of the legislature and to study legislation discussed at a conference he held here Wednesday with Governor Jones at the Roosevelt hotel. Governor Jones said legislation of mutual benefit to the city and state was discussed at this parley.

Maestri refused comment.

The session, which marks the opening of Governor Jones' third year in office, will begin at noon Monday for a 60-day constitutional tenure.

Governor Jones will deliver his legislative address, outlining his legislative proposals and reviewing the accomplishments and future aims of his administration, at 8:30 p. m. Central War Time Tuesday. The session settles down to work immediately thereafter.

Reports conflict as to whether the session will be a harmonious one. Several state leaders have indicated their belief it will be, but oppositionists hold to the other view. Reports have gained circulation that at least 19 of the 39 senators are loosely knit in the Old Regular group and pledged to vote as a unit on measures the majority may choose to oppose.

Governor Jones reportedly controls the House members, however.

Noe, recently acquitted on a federal income tax evasion charge, has just returned from Washington and is believed to be laying the groundwork for his candidacy for governor two years hence. Eighteen months ago he announced he would run for the Senate this year for the seat now held by Senator Ellender, but indications are that he has abandoned this plan and will concentrate on a race for the governorship in 1944.

The rift between Jones and Noe, allies against Earl Long, backed by Maestri in 1940, now appears complete and absolute. Most of the few Noe associates who took office in the present state government since have resigned or been removed.

Reports were current today that H. E. Dickard of Monroe, head of the minerals division of the conservation department, and a Noe appointee, had been fired in the purge of Noe appointees following the Jones-Noe rift. Conservation department officials so far have not commented.

The Opportunity Of A Century

The state legislature will have before it a proposed new criminal code for Louisiana, drafted by the Louisiana State Law institute under authority of an act of the 1940 legislature. It is to be sincerely hoped that the painstaking care and study over a period of two years which produced the proposed draft will not be wasted and that the legislature will give to the state a criminal code that is modern and lacking the many hodgepodge features of the present code.

On another page of The World today is a news story in which Federal Judge Ben C. Dawkins and Dr. J. Denson Smith of L. S. U. discuss the need for revision of the present code. Judge Dawkins was one of several judges called by the law institute as advisers in drawing up the proposed code and Dr. Smith is one of the directors of the institute. The hope of Judge Dawkins that any disagreement on individual features of the draft submitted will not bring an endless snarl blocking the code as a whole is worthy of especial attention by every legislator. Dr. Smith's review of our past difficulties with our criminal code and his reference to the legislature as having "the opportunity of more than a century" to clear the legal muddle in our criminal laws is actual fact rather than mere descriptive phraseology.

Louisiana actually has been struggling with its criminal code for more than a century. It is strange indeed that a state with a civil code looked on as extremely progressive and effective should have repeatedly failed to move on the criminal side of jurisprudence. When Louisiana was acquired by the United States James Workman drew up a criminal code—in 1805. In 1814, Governor Claiborne complained of the need for revision of the criminal code. Edward Livingston worked on it for three years in the 1820's. Further attempts at improvement were made in 1855, in 1870 and in 1908, but the legislature never approved the recommendations. There were additional moves in 1936 and 1938 and finally in 1940 the legislature authorized the state law institute to draw up a code to be submitted to the 1942 legislature.

Failure by the legislature to act now literally will be discarding "the opportunity of a century," for Louisiana now is operating basically under its Crimes Act of 1805.

Louisiana now has a fairly modern code for procedure against criminal offenders, but the actual definition of crimes and punishments is hidden under a hodgepodge of statutes, often poorly related and confusing, frequently actually contradictory to each other. Larceny, fraud and false dealing are covered, for example, by more than 50 present statutes.

The proposed code offers a simple draft of crimes and punishments, with the intent of the law better fulfilled and with a saving of time and clarification of justice in the courts virtually certain to result from its adoption. Instead of many variations of "assault to commit so and so," for example, it provides just "simple battery" and "aggravated battery." Instead of larceny, grand larceny, misappropriation, embezzlement, et cetera, it provides just theft, with punishment of various degrees.

No doubt there will be some phases of the proposed code which will meet with sincere opposition in some quarters. That is only natural. The criminal defender, the criminal prosecutor, the civil lawyer, the criminal court judge and the civil court judge all may view statutes and jurisprudence from different angles. These varying viewpoints undoubtedly can be ironed out to the general satisfaction of all if the legislature will bend its efforts in that direction and make a determined effort.

What must be avoided above everything else is anything in the nature of a snarl over some single point that would block all action on the code as a whole. That has been the story too often in the past century and the coming legislature should find the wisdom and the foresight to make sure there is no repetition now.

Perhaps some will feel that the proposed code gives too much leeway to judges in imposing maximum sentences for major crimes, but that leeway is the tendency in nearly all criminal courts in the country. It is essential to give flexibility to imposing of punishment in order to maintain administration of true justice. Where that system has failed to work, the fault has rested with the court rather than with the law.

It is important for the legislature and the people of Louisiana to realize that the completion of the code is in itself a major accomplishment, one that should mark a cornerstone in Louisiana progress. It should be recognized as such and be given the attention its importance warrants. The legislature undoubtedly will wish to study it carefully from the non-lawyer angle, but such study should not be prolonged into inaction.

Where conflict of opinion develops over individual sections of the proposed code, we suggest that those sections be compared with the present statutes and a choice made fairly and impartially.

Laugh of the week: Johnny Downs' story (he doesn't remember where he heard it) about a traveling salesman who was motoring through the south, and stopped at a wayside station for some gas. "Who's he?" demanded the hillbilly. At this, the salesman wasted no time. "Hey, buddy!" he cried, "never mind the gas. Give me a set of tires!"

At Universal yesterday, Janet Blair told a story about a woman who went to a local dress shop and asked to see evening gowns. As she donned each gown, she sat in a straight chair, spread her knees as far apart as possible—and rejected each dress because it was "too tight." "But madame," wailed the proprietor, "these are as full-skirted as any gowns we make. What do you want?" "Sir," replied the customer, with frozen dignity, "I play the cello at the Philharmonic."

OUR CHILDREN

By Angelo Patri

The teacher was talking about helping out in the war. "We must all, save and save, buy stamps and bonds, give all we have to help end the war in victory for us."

She noticed that Timothy scowled all through her plea and his hand was not raised when she asked for volunteers to help in the stamp sale. Afterward she talked to him. At first he would not talk, maintaining a sullen silence.

Finally, the teacher said, "I don't understand you, Tim. Usually you are first to offer help in anything we want to do, and now, in this real emergency, when your country needs your help, you hold back. What is it?"

Timothy struggled with himself before he said, "I'm fed up on saving. It's all I hear at home. Save! Save! Save! I'm sick and tired of it."

"Are you saving for stamps or—"

"I'm not allowed to spend one single cent of my allowance for anything. I can't have a soda, I can't buy corn for my pigeons. I can't buy a bit of chocolate, I can't go to a movie. Nothing. What's the good of living if that's all we get out of it, school, lessons, sleep, save. For what?"

"All right, Tim. I see it. Come along, you and I and some of the other fellows and we'll have a drink and talk."

The crowd with the teacher went into the candy store and sat at the little tables, and everybody had drinks—chocolates, sodas, pops, and what not. Everybody talked at once and had a fine time. Nothing was said about saving.

Days later, the teacher called a meeting and the boys took over. They planned to do certain hours of work, for pay, and give a portion of it to the war funds. "You must be careful, though, to keep enough for your necessities," said the teacher. "If you feel that sodas and movies and such are necessities, plan for them. War funds need not take all you have. There must always be a margin for living."

That brought on a lively discussion. What are necessities? For some a soda when the thirst for it comes is a necessity; for others a movie; for still others a new hat is essential for morale. Some people get perfect satisfaction out of the feeling of sacrifice. If they can go without something they thought they needed, they feel just fine. It all depends upon that feeling.

Forcing children to save, to make sacrifices for the war, to discipline themselves in service, will not succeed. Before they can serve to any purpose they will have to feel the need for it and that feeling must come from the inside. It can be reached by the right appeal, no other way.

When the boys and girls hear the stories from the front, when they get a letter from a brother or father from the ships on the sea, they feel like doing something to help; they want to give what they have. When they listen to stories of sacrifice by soldiers and sailors and airmen, they are quick to respond.

But don't let's try to force that feeling. Let's encourage it, but at the same time encourage the children to the belief that they are in the right when they feel they would like to enjoy their lives here at home at the same time.

A healthy home army is what supports the all-out army at the front. Children can only do their bit and that must be limited by their understanding. Promote that and withhold even the feeling of force.

Sunday School Lesson

Sunday School Lesson For May 17
Text: Matthew 22:41-23:11
By William E. Gilroy, D. D.
(Editor Of Advance)

Our lesson presents what has become the question of the ages, and at the same time tells of the deepest tragedy in the age-long history of religion.

The question is, what think ye of the Christ?, and Jesus asked it to confound those who were obviously gathered together against Him, challenging His right to teach the people and to do good work because He did not have the official badge, or label, of their particular authority. The scribes and the Pharisees who confronted Jesus were probably no worse, and no better, than those official religious leaders who from time to time have presumed to assume that they had a monopoly of religious truth, or of the right to exercise religious functions. Among these scribes and Pharisees were the finest and most earnest people in Israel, and this has been true of religious leaders in every age. But among them, also, were those whose religion was formal, who cared a great deal more about their own power and prerogatives than they did about essential factors of righteousness, truth, and fairness toward their fellowmen.

This is the age-long tragedy of religion—that so many who have made high professions have not had lives that were established in essential goodness and kindliness. This is the ultimate test of the reality of a man's religion. Is he essentially a good man, fair toward his fellowmen, generous, kindly, manifesting all those fruits of the Spirit which Paul enumerated with such delicate care? True religion is not a matter of mere conformity to some teaching of man; it is a consecration of one's life to the God of love, whose character and saving power are manifest in Jesus of Nazareth.

Jesus made the conflict between hypocrisy and formalism on the one hand, and the religion of love and goodness on the other, so unmistakably plain that it is strange that men should not have profited more fully from that teaching. Yet, the spirit of the scribes and Pharissees of old continues to be far too manifest even in our modern world, and those who make the greatest profession of being God's chosen quite frequently give too little evidence of having chosen God and made His love the dominant beauty and power of their lives.

Here, then, we come to the age-long question that is important above all others—What think ye of the Christ? The answer is found not in some dogmatic or doctrinal formula, but it is manifested in the heartfelt acceptance of the example and way that Jesus exemplified. We cannot only think rightly of Christ, but we can find the strength to follow in His footsteps if we will avail ourselves of His power to save.

THE FOWL OF GLOWING CHARCOAL—The Chinese glowing charcoal pheasant (lopophorus lhuysii) roams in the heart of central China over a limited zone of the highest mountains. Its name is derived from the beautiful metallic luster of its feathers. No white man has ever seen it alive. Two stuffed specimens are now in the British museum.

IN WASHINGTON

By Peter Edson
(Monroe Morning World Washington Correspondent)

This being the time of year when people go fishing, listen to a big fish story from Washington.

The fish concerned is the menhaden. It's a member of the herring tribe. It breeds—oh boy, how it breeds in the warm waters of the Caribbean. It is virtually the most prolific of all fish and all the menhaden taken out of the sea by the ton haven't lowered the water level by so much as a Death Valley drop.

Coming spring, the menhaden starts north with the ball clubs, only, being confined to the sea, the fish stick to the warm water currents, swimming close to the shore so they can pick up the scores. They travel as far as Long Island Sound, taking in the smart resorts—Palm Beach, Sea Island, Virginia Beach, Atlantic City and Newport, though they never round Cape Cod to Boston. They stay north all during the baseball season, but by world series time, they're usually heading south for the winter.

It would be a nice life for the menhaden, except that they're rather small. About five inches for the yearlings on the northbound trip. They grow considerably in the benign backwaters of Bailey's beach, Buzzard's Bay and such smart watering places, and on the return trip they're much better catches. Full grown, a menhaden may reach two and a half pounds, or up to 18 inches.

The menhaden schools are attacked by practically everything—barracuda, blue fish, sharks, dog fish, tuna. Yet the little fish aren't very good eating. What the menhaden apparently provide is a kind of castor oil for all the fish in the sea. That's Nature for you.

Big Business

Other things that attack the menhaden are men. Fishermen. That brings us to the reason for this story.

The fishermen don't catch the menhaden to eat, either. They catch the menhaden to make into vitamins and fish-meal and fertilizer and such stuff. A 2 per cent to 4 per cent mix of menhaden oil in poultry feed is supposed to make hens lay eggs like nobody's business. It's practically magic.

That being so, menhaden fish catching is an important business. Before P. H., a lot of this fish oil and fish meal was imported from Japan. But that's out now, so the menhaden fishing season is more important than ever.

The sovereign states whose shores are hugged by the waters through which the menhaden migrate have long realized, however, that menhaden fishing was a good thing, and they passed laws to protect menhaden fishermen of their states from being competed with by those of other states. Every sea-going state, you remember, is supposed to control its ocean for three miles out and, as menhaden travel in shallow water, the states can practically dictate who catches 'em.

States Strict

Seventeen states have passed laws restricting menhaden catching. They restrict the size of boat owned by residents of other states. They charge higher license fees for fishermen from other states. For example, Delaware has no restrictions. Rhode Island prohibits non-residents from fishing for menhaden. Connecticut charges a non-resident license fee of $200. New Jersey charges $750 license for residents and $1,200 for non-residents. And so on.

These barriers now provide a bottleneck that is interfering with the war effort, by golly. And look what has happened. This piece that started out to be just another fish story has developed into something of political and economic and social significance. British babies can't get enough vitamins because dried egg shipments are down because there aren't enough vitamins in the hen food because production of fish meal is limited because New Jersey has a law that won't let Delaware fishermen catch menhaden off Sandy Hook and Raritan.

Congressman Philip A. Traynor of Wilmington, Del., introduced a bill to provide wartime suspension of state laws restricting menhaden fishing, but politicians from some of the other states ganged up on it, called it unconstitutional, and have apparently killed it deader than a herring. And that's the end of today's fish story.

Born in Copiah county, Lawrence lived his boyhood in Claiborne county. He joined the army during the first world war and after it was over went to law school.

CURFEW

CLAY CENTER, Kans.—(AP)—Harlan Perrill had trouble getting his baby chicks to sleep until he tried the curfew method, using his son's French horn. The chicks perversely insisted upon staying up until dark instead of going to bed at 8 p.m. (war time) as Perrill wanted them to do. But he noticed that they always dashed for the brooder house when a train whistled nearby. So, at 8 p.m. he blew a couple of toots on the French horn; the chicks headed for the roost and Perrill nonchalantly locked them in.

DUTCH SOLDIERS REACH JACKSON

Consider American Visit Short Detour From Java To Tokyo

JACKSON, Miss., May 9.—(AP)—A ontingent of sun-tanned Dutchmen vho consider their American visit ust a short detour from Java to okyo arrived here late yesterday to nter training for the air service.

The number was not made public a ut their arrival was the signal for n official announcement today that en from the Dutch East Indies, as ell as Britishers already over here y the hundreds, would be schooled the southeast army air forces train- g center.

The Dutchmen preferred to be vague bout the trip up from the south acific, and their port of departure emained a military secret.

"The point is," said Lieutenant olonel J. J. Zomer, in charge of the etachment, "that we are here, and at we can train better here than nywhere else in the world."

"My men," added the colonel in uent English, "consider the United ates just a short detour from Java er to Tokyo."

The contingent, composed of Dutch d Javanese aviation students, their structors and their officers, recently ere employed in varying stages of aining of combat in Java, when war onditions impeded further progress.

Not only pilots but navigators, mbardiers and radio men were in e group. Students, officers, and in- ructors of both the Dutch army and vy were represented.

Officers said the detachment brought th it both flying and ground in- ructors, and would operate as a unit der the supervision of the training nter.

Uniforms of the group, just out of e combat zone, ranged from heavy rk blue winter blouses and over- ats of Australian manufacture to ce breeches and wrap leggings and e abbreviated short pants worn by tch troops in Java.

"My men are very anxious to be ained and get back to the fight," d the commander.

He said his fliers, who found it diffi- lt to get daytime training in Java ause of the threat of raids, and ssible to train at night because illumination would have made home field a target for Jap s, welcomed the chance to con- unharassed in the United States.

by installing intermediate pump stations. The line now ends in North Carolina, he said, but would be extended to a point somewhere north of Norfolk, Va. The program also involves the extension of some lines from the Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas fields to the Mississippi river to facilitate inland waterway shipments, he said.

Under the program approved by Price Administrator Leon Henderson, pleasure drivers who hold seven-unit "A" rationing cards will be entitled to buy a total of 21 gallons of gasoline during the 47-day period from May 15 to July 1, when a permanent and more elaborate rationing plan will go into effect.

OPA estimated that, under war production board orders curtailing gasoline deliveries 50 per cent in the Eastern area, about 401,784,600 gallons would be available for use in private passenger cars in the rationed area during the 47 days. The figure does not include estimated requirements of trucks, buses, other commercial vehicles, and non-highway users, all of which are exempt from rationing.

All automobile owners who need their automobiles in connection with their work will be given additional rations, depending on individual need, OPA said.

About one-third of the 8,500,000 car owners in the rationed area will qualify for the basic 3-gallon-a-week ration, OPA predicted, while about two-thirds will be eligible for larger amounts obtainable through supplementary ration cards.

RUTGERS HONORS 2 WAR REPORTERS

Clark Lee And Martin Ogronsky Given Awards In Absentia

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., May 9.—(AP)—Parents of two noted sons of Rutgers University stood proudly before applauding alumni today as the president of this colonial college awarded to Clark Lee and Martin Ogronsky, in Absentia, high awards for outstanding accomplishments in reporting the war.

"For courage and skill as a war correspondent," was inscribed on the Rutgers University award, a bronze medallion, accepted by Mrs. Clayton D. Lee, mother of the Associated Press war correspondent of Far East fame.

Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Agrons of Atlantic City, received the honor accorded their son, National Broadcasting Company war correspondent, as a "fearless and searching interpreter of world events."

Mrs. Lee smiled faintly as she listened to the citation acclaiming her adventurous son and then, as the audience rose to honor her and Clark, she said:

"I am grateful for the years that Clark spent at Rutgers and the fine ideals he learned which made him the fine newspaper man he is today. For Clark and myself I accept the honor.

"If Clark can survive the mulesteak sandwiches and continue to dodge Japanese bullets he may acknowledge this honor personally."

Agronsky cabled from New Zealand: "I am deeply honored with the recognition by my alma mater. I sincerely hope that I shall always be able to live up to the great traditions of this university."

A native of California Lee came from a newspaper family. His father was one of the founders of the United Press Associations, his mother was a columnist with the Newark Sunday Call and his sister was a society editor of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

Lee joined the staff of the Associated Press bureau at Newark, then went to New York and later was chief of bureau in Mexico City. After service in the Orient he was in the Philippines when the war broke out. From there he sent news stories of Japanese invasion that won praise of military as well as newspaper authorities.

CAPITOL TALKS OF U. S. DRIVE

more clearly indicated an important Allied victory.

Secretary of State Hull told reporters that he could only restrain himself with difficulty from language equal to the magnitude of the reported victory. Like many another, however, he felt that he should withhold any more definite statement until all the facts have been received.

As Washington pieced the news together, American naval units had intercepted a Japanese force of considerable proportions intent either upon opening the way for an invasion of Australia, upon establishing itself in new bases which would facilitate an invasion or upon cutting the American sea line to that island continent.

Attacking by sea and air American forces punished the enemy flotilla so severely that it fled, with the Americans following and renewing the assault. Known enemy losses were heavy. American losses were not announced, but were said officially to have been relatively slight.

There was the unmistakable outline of a notable victory.

Nevertheless, officials cautioned against jumping at the conclusion that Japanese seapower in the area had been smashed. The enemy, it was said, would still be able to muster a strength there that must not be minimized.

There was elation, however, in the thought that in a war of destruction and replacement such as is this one, every Japanese ship sunk is doubly a victory. For Japan lacks the facilities for building new warships on anything like the numbers or the speed of which American ways are capable.

Addressing the nation on April 27, Mr. Roosevelt reviewed the developments of the war, and told of "serious losses" in the far Pacific. But, he added:

"There is good reason to believe that their (the Japanese) southward advance has been checked. Australia, New Zealand and much other territory will be bases for offensive action—and we are determined that the territory which has been lost will be regained."

The sea battle was regarded here as concrete evidence that Mr. Roosevelt had gauged the situation correctly.

PRICE CEILINGS TO TAKE EFFECT

first experience with OPA ceilings on the cost of their merchandise.

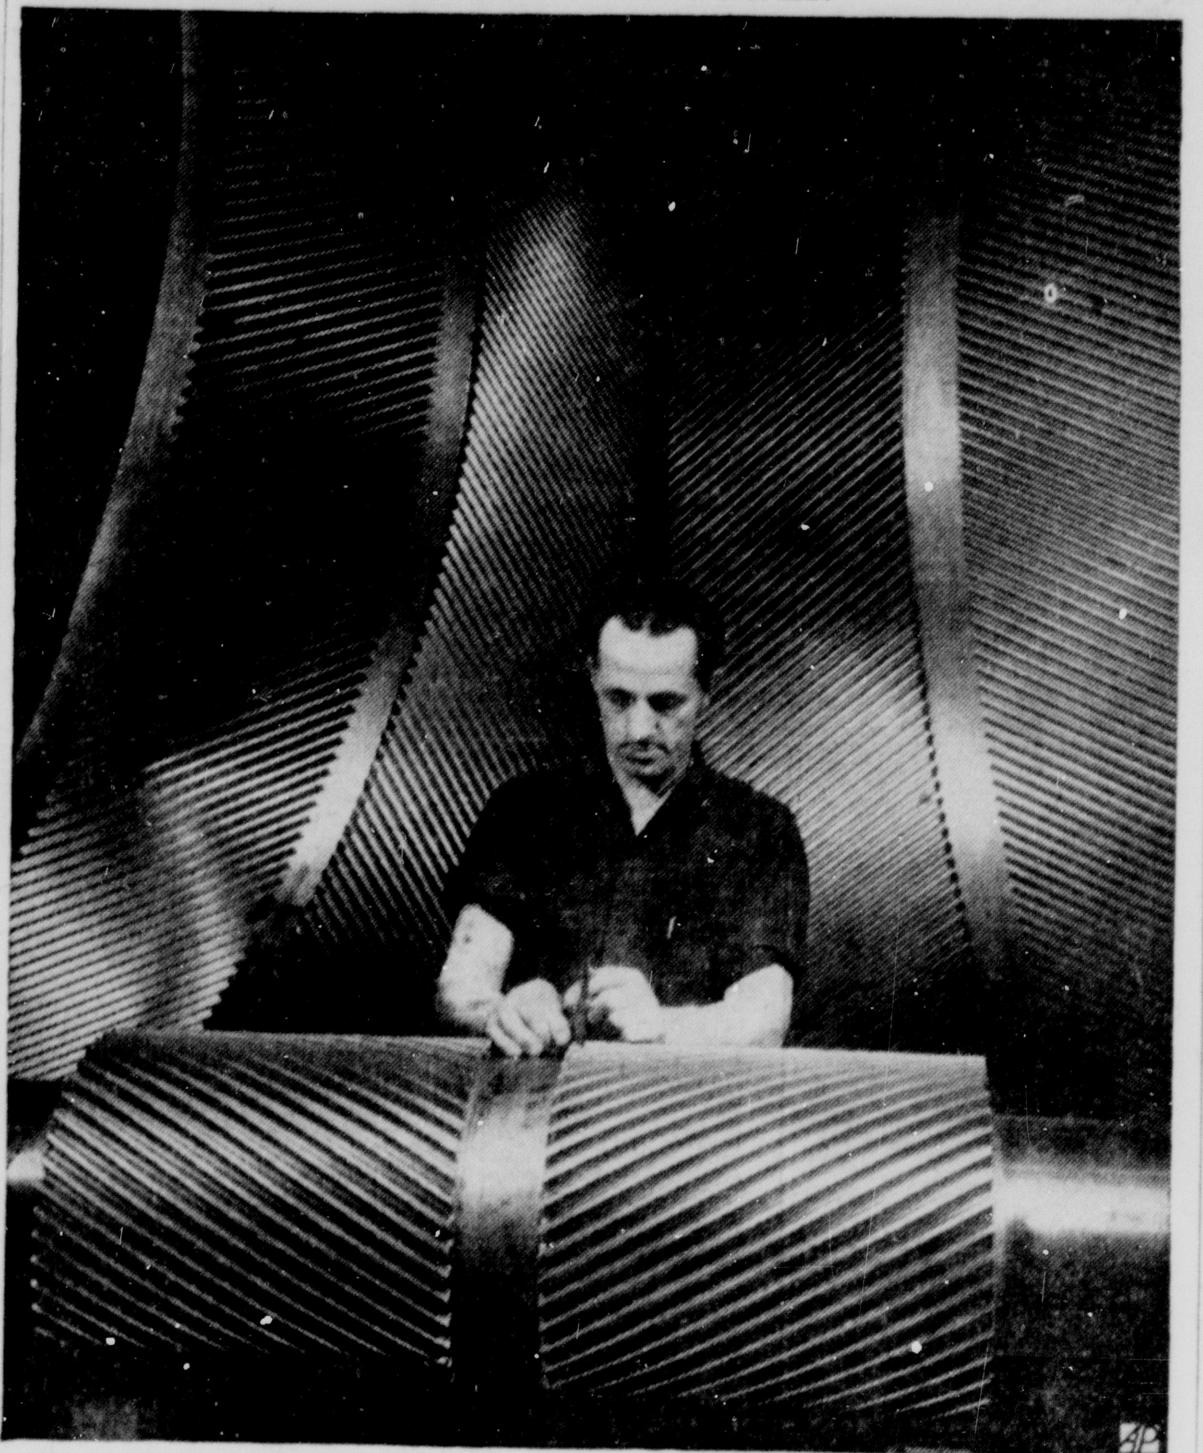
They will have a week to stock up at March wholesale prices before they, in turn, must adjust their selling prices to that level.

"The biggest job right now," OPA Administrator Leon Henderson declared today, "is to start selling at the maximum prices laid down in the regulation.

"You—and I mean every manufacturer and wholesaler affected—will find that by far the greatest part of your price work can be handled easily and swiftly. Don't stop everything and call for help just because a problem has arisen at one point. Set it aside, and go ahead with the rest of the job.

"OPA is rapidly gearing its organization to give any help that is needed. It is a tremendous task and will take time. Until the machinery is set up and operating, manufacturers and wholesalers with problems to solve must exercise patience."

PATTERN FOR POWER



Mighty gears form an arresting photographic pattern as an inspector works on machinery which will become part of the power plant of a United States naval vessel.

SIX-DAY COMBAT ENDS IN FLIGHT

ships will be announced when it "will be without value to the enemy."

For the moment, at least, Australia and its lifeline to the United States were secure and the initiative still lay firmly in Allied hands.

The Japanese, however, enjoying numerical superiority and shorter communication lines than the American navy, still had deadly naval and air forces clustered in the region of the battle and might at any time recoil in greater power.

The impressive sea and naval victory—greatest Allied triumph of five months of war with Japan—and the sudden turn of events in central Burma were needed tonics for the United Nations.

The Chinese said officially they had captured Sagaing, near Mandalay, and other Burmese towns after a long forced march. The victory was said to have cut the "way of retreat" of the Japanese column in China's Yunnan province.

British troops on the right escaped a Japanese trap and took up prepared positions near the Indian frontier.

A "powerful force" of huge British bombers—meaning several hundred—returned to its task of destruction on Europe's second front, leaving a German aircraft factory at Warnemuende in flames, and again hammering the Baltic port of Rostock, already a shambles from four recent heavy raids.

These were blows of attrition against Nazi submarine nests and the luftwaffe. Daylight raiders continued to attack the bristling coast of northern Europe.

The amazing Russians proceeded grimly with their mission of killing Germans—60,000 before Leningrad alone in two months—and charged for the first time that the frustrated Nazis had used poison gas. The charge perhaps was a prelude to even bloodier and ghastlier warfare which appears imminent on the vast 2,000-mile eastern front.

The Japanese twice bombed the Indian port of Chittagong, 220 air miles from Calcutta, but the damage was slight. At the opposite end of the Indian ocean, the British proceeded to mop up scattered Vichy resistance in Madagascar and secure its strategic position against Adolf Hitler's oriental Axis partners. The French said two forces still were resisting.

The African battlefield remains quiescent in sweltering desert sunshine, and Malta's defenses claimed ten more German planes.

All in all, it was a good picture which the eloquent Winston Churchill could paint for his worldwide audience in a radio address set for today.

The British prime minister whose salty rhetoric has done much to rally the United Nations to a fighting pitch, had an enormous story of cheer to tell of great sea battle off Australia, even though the victorious forces were predominantly American.

In the Coral sea graveyard lay a Japanese aircraft carrier, two cruisers, two destroyers, four gunboats and two supply or transport ships. Another carrier probably was sunk, but the Allies said officially it was damaged along with two other cruisers, a seaplane tender and two transport or supply ships.

The Japanese, indeed, acknowledged the loss of a carrier and 31 planes, but claimed the sinking of an American battleship, two carriers and a destroyer. The Japanese said they damaged three other warships and shot down 81 planes but it sounded like Tokyo was whistling in the dark to keep up its courage.

A similar flambouyant claim of victory came from Admiral Sankichi Takahashi, former commander of the Japanese navy. He said:

"The fate of Australia seems to have been sealed and her days seem to be very much numbered."

More logically, Secretary of State Hull in Washington commented that it was difficult to restrain one's self from expressions equal to the magnitude of the victory. He too, however, cautioned against conclusions before the full facts are at hand.

These facts include the Allied losses, and the disposition of Japanese naval power still within striking distance. Japan's main fleet has been reported at the mandated island of Truk, to the northeast of the Coral sea and it appeared entirely possible the enemy might return with strength greater than he has ever before deployed on the high seas.

Japan's losses were inflicted where they hurt the most, since already there was evidence that the enemy was feeling the pinch of shipping losses.

The victory meant that at least two and perhaps three of her eight or nine regular carriers were sunk. The cruiser strength had been reduced by 18, or 35 per cent. At least 25 destroyers had been sunk, or 20 per cent of her strength in that category.

Allied headquarters felt that the spearhead of the first major Japanese thrust toward Australia or its supply lines had been broken or blunted.

Preliminary accounts ranked the battle's magnitude with those of Macassar strait, the sea of Java or Matapan—and fuller accounts might even place it in the category of the battle of Jutland, one of history's turning points.

There was this difference to the tragic sea engagements for the Dutch East Indies: this time the Japanese were forced to retire. In the other battles, the Japanese pressed forward despite the grave wounds inflicted by Allied sea and air power.

OPA CLINIC TO BE CONDUCTED

be specialists both from a price and legal point of view.

After their presentation, those attending will be able to ask questions on points that they desire to have cleared up.

There will be but seven regional meetings of this nature held in Louisiana and it is urged that all dealers in merchandise of any description be present as the information will be vitally needed in their business.

To be explained by the price administration specialists will be how the over-all price regulation places an absolute ceiling over substantially all commodities and services sold at retail. The ceiling also extends over prices charged by wholesalers, manufacturers and producers—the ceiling being the highest prices charged by each individual seller for each commodity or service during the month of March, 1942.

The regulation has been termed as strictly a wartime measure that will apply for the duration and be abandoned as soon as possible after peace comes. As will be explained to the meeting here, the general price control means a guarantee to the American people that their costs of living will remain stable, that the buying power of wages and salaries will not be impaired, and that scarce goods will not go solely to those who have the most money, but that all the people, rich and poor alike, will have an equal chance to obtain their share at a fair price.

last radio broadcast when, on the night of February 15, he announced the fall of Singapore.

But the "second front," a subject which every Briton but the prime minister appears to have discussed in public, probably will not be included. Although there are certain signs that the government is changing its mind about offensive action on the continent this year, informed sources say that a public discussion by Churchill would be the "height of folly."

The fuel rationing issue hinges on whether Britain will ration coal, electricity and gas or call soldiers back from the army to the mines on the eve of what the Manchester Guardian calls "decisive operations."

Churchill is expected to defend the government's fuel rationing plan on just this point—that withdrawal of the troops would wreck key divisions on the eve of months which many view as the most important of the war.

HONOR TO OTHER FLAGS IS URGED

Roosevelt Calls For Tribute To All Of United Nations

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP)—President Roosevelt asked American citizens tonight to honor the peoples of all the United Nations in observing Flag Day this year because the United States was only one of 26 nations "fighting in the greatest cause the world has known" and "unless all triumph, all will fail."

In a proclamation urging the people to display the American flag and where feasible to fly the joint emblems of all freedom-loving nations on June 14, the chief executive said America was dedicating "All that we have and all that we are to the combat" and pledged:

"We will not stop this side of victory."

The president described the current conflict as a "planetary war" in which the united nations were fighting together as the "massed, angered forces of common humanity" to free the people of the earth from the most powerful, ruthless and savage enemy ever known to mankind.

While tomorrow is Mother's Day, Mr. Roosevelt asked that the people again express their devotion on Flag Day to "Our courageous mothers, many of whom are sending out their sons to do battle with the enemy and all of whom are so loyally contributing to the waging of the war on the home front."

The text of President Roosevelt's proclamation of Flag Day follows:

FLAG DAY, 1942

For many years it has been our American custom to set aside June 14 in honor of the flag, the emblem of our freedom, our strength, and our unity as an independent nation under God. Now we are fighting in the greatest cause the world has known. We are fighting to free the people of this earth from the most ruthless, the most savage enemy the world has ever seen. We are dedicating all that we have and all that we are to the combat. We will not stop this side of victory.

We as a nation are not fighting alone. In this planetary war we are a part of a great whole: we are fighting shoulder to shoulder with the valiant peoples of the United Nations, the massed, angered forces of common humanity. Unless all triumph, all will fail.

For these reasons it is fitting that on our traditional flag day we honor not only our own colors but also the flags of those who have, with us, signed the declaration by United Nations, paying homage to those nations awaiting liberation from the tyranny we all oppose, to those whose lands have escaped the scars of battle, to those who have long been heroically fighting in the blaze and havoc of war.

It is also fitting in this time of stress that we express our devotion to our courageous mothers, many of whom are sending out their sons to do battle with the enemy and all of whom are so loyally contributing to the waging of the war on the home front.

Now, therefore, I Franklin D. Roosevelt, president of the United States of America, do hereby ask that on Flag Day, June 14, 1942, the people of our nation honor the peoples of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, China, Australia, Belgium, Canada, Costa Rica, Cuba, Czecho-Slovakia, the Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, India, Luxembourg, The Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Poland, the Union of South Africa, Yugoslavia—knowing that only in the strength and valor of our unswerving unity shall we find the force to bring freedom and peace to mankind.

I direct the officials of the federal government, and I request the officials of the state and local governments, to have our colors displayed on all govment buildings on Flag Day, and I urge the people of the United States to fly the American flag from their homes in honor of the nation's mothers and their valiant sons in the service, and to arrange, where feasible, for joint displays of the emblems of the freedom-loving nations on that day.

ATTORNEYS WANT NO SUPERSEDURE

Would Repeal Statute Giving Attorney General Broad Powers

BATON ROUGE, La., May 9.—(AP)—A resolution urging the legislature to repeal a 1934 statute vesting broad powers in the attorney general to supersede district attorneys was adopted today by the Louisiana Association of District Attorneys.

The group also appointed a legislative committee to work during the session convening Monday, particularly with respect to the proposed new criminal code prepared by the Louisiana Law institute. The code was the principal point discussed at the association meet which was presided over by District Attorney Dewey Sanchez of East Baton Rouge parish.

Also endorsed by the group was the proposal of District Attorney Bernard Cocke of New Orleans for repeal of Act 22 of the second extra session of 1935, giving the attorney general power to appoint assistants and clerks of the Orleans parish district attorney.

Both this and the broad supersession law were passed at legislative sessions during the political regime of the late Huey P. Long. In lieu of the 1934 supersession law, the association asked reenactment of articles 17 and 156 of the code of criminal procedure, which articles the 1934 law repealed.

Named to the legislative committee were District Attorneys Cocke, L. O. Pecot of the 16th judicial district; Leander Perez, 25th district; Al Hundley, ninth district; and Aubert L. Talbot, 23rd district.

During the course of discussion respecting the proposed new code of criminal law, District Attorney Talbot suggested to the group that two additional years study be devoted to the work before presentation to the legislature. However, it was further suggested by authors of the code that the district attorneys study it during the next few weeks and make their suggestions of changes before final action by the legislature.

Answers to questions put by various district attorneys were made by Professors Dale E. Bennett of the Louisiana State University Law school and Leon Sarpy of Loyola university who, together with Professor Clarence J. Morrow of Tulane university, who was absent, prepared the proposed code from a study of existing state law together with suggestions from prominent jurists in the state and throughout the nation.

New Agriculture Building To Meet Needs Of Farmers

BIG RECEPTION WILL BE HELD ON WEDNESDAY

21,000 Farm Center One Of Most Complete Buildings Of Kind In State

The $21,000 Ouachita Parish Agricul- re building, one of the most ade- uately-equipped structures of its nd in Louisiana, will hold its for- al opening Wednesday night when a eception will be held from 6 to 9 clock.

Situated at 704 Cypress street, West onroe, the sprawling one-story rick veneer building symbolizes the forts of the people of Ouachita par- h, the Parish Police jury, and the ty of West Monroe to obtain facili- es suitable to the requirements of e farm people in the parish.

Realizing that facilities for offices the agricultural extension service, e home demonstration council, the iple-A, located in the courthouse, d the emergency feed and seed loan fice, located behind the Old Post- fice building, were inadequate, the rish farmers approached the police y for assistance. This was in June, 41.

The police jury agreed to erect a rm building, and last September e West Monroe site, approximately by 80 feet, located on the east le of Cypress street was approved the group. The location on Cy- ess street, the route of the four- e United States Highway 80, is two ocks from the Bridge street inter- tion.

The contract for the construction of new agriculture center was arded last December to C. E. An- ews, Ruston contractor, by the po- e jury, which named H. H. Land, chitect, and J. W. Smith, supervisor construction.

The land was purchased by the jury d the West Monroe city council, h body contributed half of the 0 needed for the purchase.

ound for the parish farm struc- was broken a month later, and rick veneer structure with com- ion slate roof and four white umns framing the entrance was pleted the latter part of March.

l offices were removed to the new ding on April 13, except the emer- ncy feed and seed loan office, ich moved about a week later. The lls of the various offices are cream- ored with 36 inch wainscoating in ural finish. The walls for the cor- ors and the spacious auditorium-laboratory are stipled above the wainscoating border.

Features of the new building are the conference room and the auditorium-laboratory. The conference room contains a lounge, chairs and table, and the room opens into the auditorium which accommodates 150 people. A large stage contains the kitchen equipment with which demonstrations will be given.

Fluorescent ceiling lamps provide the artificial lighting except over the kitchen where incandescent bulbs are employed.

The building was completed at a cost of $21,373, and the furniture and fixtures were purchased for approximately $2,000. Together with the $2,500 for the property, and the $1,400 fee for the architect, the project cost approximately $27,000. Furniture for the conference room and auditorium-laboratory was added by the home demonstration council.

Offices in the agriculture building are the Ouachita parish agricultural extension service, D. L. Bornman, agent; Mrs. Jewel L. McQuiller, home demonstration agent; W. A. Downs, assistant county agent; Mrs. Doris Braden, assistant home demonstration agent, and Mrs. Mae Lucky, secretary; Triple-A, I. E. Lucas, administrative officer; Beth Peacock, senior Triple-A clerk; Mrs. Gussie Hill, chief Triple-A clerk; Dorothy Watson, clerk; Marjorie Filhiol and Ida Chapman, assistant clerks, and emergency feed and seed loan, G. D. McKnight, field representative.

Recently, the home demonstration council adopted a resolution of thanks expressing "its warmest appreciation and thanks to the police jury of Ouachita parish and City of West Monroe, for their cooperation and support in supplying this agricultural center which meets the long felt need of the home demonstration work in Ouachita parish."

Appreciation was expressed to these groups, the resolution stated, because "members of the home demonstration council of Ouachita parish have long felt a need for more adequate office space and laboratory space in order that they might more adequately and efficiently conduct their educational programs through meetings and demonstrations."

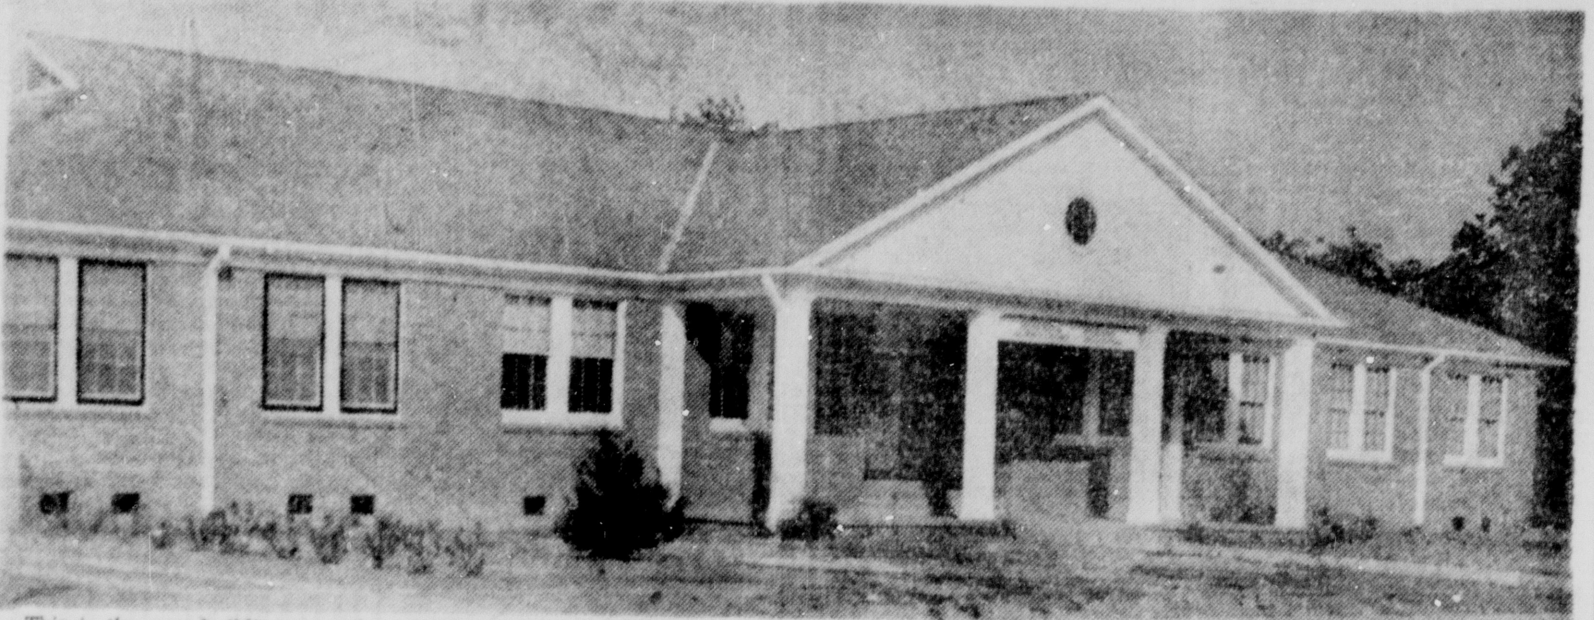
The resolution was signed by Mrs. R. R. Cann, president, and Mrs. D. E. Willis, secretary.

After making an inspection tour through the recently-completed farm center, Tom Hicks, acting president of the Police jury, said "I am proud of the building. It is an asset to the farm people of the parish." He also expressed appreciation to the members of the jury, the City of West Monroe, and people in Ouachita parish for making possible the agriculture center.

COTTON IN TIRES

The United States rubber industry used 870,000 bales of cotton, or 16 per cent of domestic consumption, for tires and other products during 1940.

NEW AGRICULTURAL BUILDING CONSTRUCTED BY POLICE JURY



This is the new building recently completed by the Ouachita parish police jury to house agricultural offices. It is located in the 700 block on Cypress street in West Monroe, is of brick veneer construction and was completed at a cost of more than $21,000.

CROP AND FEED OFFICE MOVES

Now Located In New Agricultural Building In West Monroe

The Emergency Crop and Feed Loan office, in addition to meeting the needs of the average farmer, is also designed to meet the needs of many farmers in respect to changing conditions and the production of specialized crops, many of which are speculative under ordinary conditions.

Loans are not to exceed $400. The actual sum is based on the crop acreage or the number of head of livestock to be fed. The interest rate is four per cent per year.

George D. McKnight is field supervisor with offices in the new agricultural building, Cypress street, West Monroe. His assistant is Miss Aline Hall. He has been engaged in supervisory work since 1931. During this time nearly $300,000 has been loaned to Ouachita parish farmers. Mr. McKnight has been in charge of the local office since 1935.

The office was formerly in the old postoffice building, Monroe. The state office for the Emergency crop loan is in the new postoffice building, Monroe.

Contest Day Is Climax Of The 4-H Club Year

Work Of Group Is Praised By Dean Of L. S. U. School Of Agriculture

"To Make the Best Better," has become the personal ambition of some 387 Ouachita parish boys and girls who are members of the 12 organized 4-H clubs. Working under the supervision of the Assistant Home and County Agricultural agents, these 4-H club boys and girls are developing their Head, Hearts, Hands and Health, through study of problems in Agriculture and Home Economics.

4-H club work is not just readin', writin', and 'rithmetic, but includes such subjects or "projects" as gardening, food preservation, home management, livestock management, crops production, etc. A club member selects the project he is most interested in and under the proper supervision, adopts and follows certain improved practices, learning to do by doing the latest improvements in Agriculture and Home Economics.

The 4-H club year is climaxed with the Annual Achievement or Contest Day, when members from all the clubs compete in the various judging and demonstration contests held for each project. Individuals and teams are in competition for the coveted "Baton Rouge Trip"—the annual Short Course held at the University in July, where parish winners try for the State and National Honors. Clubs compete for silver loving cups donated by the Monroe Kiwanis Club, which are presented to the outstanding Junior and Senior clubs for participation in the 4-H Rally. Club members also often receive valuable premiums of money, high grade livestock, trips and scholarships as a result of these contests.

To balance the work side of the 4-H program is the annual week of camp. Ouachita clubsters attend one of the permanent camps, Camp Grant Walker, located at Pollack, Louisiana. Camp is regarded as a sort of bonus for those club members who do outstanding work in their respective projects.

The importance of 4-H club work cannot be overemphasized and is perhaps best summarized in the words of Dean J. G. Lee, School of Agriculture, L. S. U. "In my 26 years of contact with and experiences with 4-H clubs I consider them the most important phase of Agricultural Extension Work. They train for leadership in all phases of agriculture and the thoroughness with which the training is given in youth determines the effectiveness of our agricultural leadership in the future."

WORLD'S OLDEST TREE

A Douglas fir, felled in 1895, in British Columbia, was 417 feet high and may have been the oldest tree in the world. The growth rings were not counted.

4-H CLUB GIRLS SELECT SLOGAN

Group To Participate In Garden Contest Sponsored By A. R. Wisenbaker

"Vitamins from Vegetables for Victory" is the new war time slogan adopted by 25 Ouachita Parish 4-H Club girls who are participating in a garden contest sponsored by A. R. Wisenbaker, manager of Sears, Roebuck company in Monroe. The contest is in cooperation with the program of Agricultural Extension Service to materially increase the home production of food and is being supervised by Assistant Extension Agents.

Parish winners of the contest will be selected on the basis of the girl's record and the condition of her garden when inspected. These winners will receive substantial cash premiums and the top ranking members will compete in a State Contest for a $100 War Bond.

The girls, members of the 4-H club garden project, were furnished with tomato and cabbage plants and a variety of seeds for planting a Year-Round garden. It is the girls' responsibility to plant and cultivate the garden, utilize the food in daily meals and preserve the surplus by canning or drying.

The contest offers a splendid opportunity for teaching cultivation practices, insect and plant disease control, as well as food conservation.

Participants in the contest are: Elaine Willis of Calhoun Club; Ruth Holloway, Mary Wilder, Opal Wood, Katherine Crowell and Maurine Hobbs of Okaloosa, Eloise Jeansonne and Albirdie Wallice, of Swartz; Betty Laura Aldrich, Gladys Fae Bayles, Faye Ruth Davis and Maude Elsie Coon, of Drew; Marjorie Williamson, Edna Mae Owens and Florence Allen, of Cypress; Effie Rawls, Lamar Robert, Juanita Peacock and Jean Jones, Watson; Hazel Hart and June DeMoss, Logtown; Juanita Stanton, Claiborne, and Elizabeth Landrum, Buckhorn Bend.

War Brings Problems To Agriculture Daily

D. L. Bornman, County Agent, Says More Legumes Are Planted In 1940-41

"First of all, I am looking to the agricultural extension service to carry forward on every sector of the farm front the general educational work in agriculture and home economics essential to the success of our war-time job."

These are the words of Agriculture Secretary Wickard in his charge to county and home demonstration agents and other extension workers, all over America issued soon after Pearl Harbor.

War is bringing new problems almost hourly to every branch of agriculture. Many of these require widespread, rapid response by farmers. Some of them can be foreseen in advance; but by no means all. Consequently the chief concern of the extension service is to do whatever needs to be done to meet the situations as they arise.

Farmers are producing more than ever before and the goals in agriculture for 1943 must be larger. Practically every farmer as he plans to increase production of milk, eggs, soybeans, peanuts, or other things will need technical information on how he can attain the goals for his farm with minimum labor, minimum use of fertilizer with maximum efficiency and with minimum sacrifice of his long time conservation goal.

The extension service has been called upon on many occasions in the past to assist farm people in organizing their efforts to meet national and sectional emergencies. Through agricultural organizations of local leadership the efforts have spelled steady progress in the whole agricultural field.

In Ouachita parish extension work has been on the job since the passage of the Smith-Lever act in 1914. With the police jury and the parish school board cooperating with the Louisiana State university and the United States Department of Agriculture a county and home agent has been on the job; disseminating technical agricultural information to rural and urban people, teaching farm youth through the 4-H clubs to "Make the Best Better" seeing them gradually become adult farmers capable of "making two blades of grass grow where only one grew before."

In accomplishing the task the agents working in the parish can give much of the credit to the cooperation received from the local governing bodies and more particularly to the leadership and cooperation of farm leaders both men and women who were not content to do things as "Dad used to do."

During 1941, the annual report of D. L. Bornman, Jr., county agent showed that: 68 farm men assisted as leaders in various farm activities and 31 adults serve as local leaders for the 4-H club programs. Activities such as crop production, soil conservation, beef and dairy cattle production, orchards and gardens, and agriculturing engineering were the principal ones participated by the agent. During the year 348 farm visits were made, 4,636 office calls received from farmers seeking information, 121 news stories were published; 85 circular letters were written, 4,109 bulletins on farm subjects were issued; 12 radio talks were made and a total of 208 meetings were held which were attended by a total of 8,730 people.

Forty-one of the meetings were method demonstration meetings at which skills such as pruning and spraying fruit trees, treating hogs for worms, control method of pocket gophers, etc., were taught.

Some indication of the agricultural progress can be gathered from the fact that in 1940-41 407 farmers planted 7,649 acres of winter legumes, an increase of 25 per cent over the previous year, thirty-two registered Hereford bulls were known to have been bought by farmers of the parish, who are seeking to balance their farming operations. Four hundred and forty-seven acres of forest trees were planted on land needing reforestation and seventeen 4-H clubs were organized with an enrollment of 478 boys and girls.

USDA AGENCIES ARE COMBINED

I. E. Lucas Explains Some Responsibilities Of The New A. C. A. A.

The agricultural adjustment agency, the federal crop insurance corporation, the sugar agency, and the soil conservation service, four agencies of the United States Department of Agriculture with which nearly every farmer in northeast Louisiana and the rest of the state has contacts during his farming operations, have been streamlined and grouped together for national administrative purposes into one agency, I. E. Lucas, AAA administrative officer for Ouachita parish, announced Saturday.

The new unit is known as the Agricultural Conservation and Adjustment administration. Each of the agencies will continue to operate as a separate unit, but under the direction of the administrator of the new group, Dillon S. Mayer.

"This reorganization was undertaken," Lucas said, "in order to reduce administrative expenses, avoid duplication of effort, and offer the farmers of America the greatest possible aid in meeting the Food for Freedom production goals that make up agriculture's half of the national war effort. The new ACAA has many responsibilities to the farmers, to the nation, and to our fight for freedom."

He listed some of these responsibilities as conservation, production goals, adjustment, ever normal granary, and federal crop insurance.

Conservation farming means using the land to the best advantage, considering the nation's production requirements for tomorrow as well as today. It is not limited to saving up soil fertility for future generations.

The agricultural adjustment agency is making payments to nearly all of the nation's six million farmers for carrying out practices that build up and protect the soil. It likewise makes payments for planting in accordance with either maximum or minimum acreage allotments—to encourage crops that are needed most and to avoid wasting vital land by growing crops that are not needed.

The soil conservation service provides technical aid to farmers in carrying out more intensive conservation practices after a careful survey of the needs of individual farms and watersheds.

The yardstick for measuring the importance of these programs is their contribution toward achievement of agriculture's production goals. For years, goals have been used by the AAA on basic crops, but something new was added in 1942 when goals were set up for all farm products.

Last fall AAA committeemen conducted a farm-to-farm canvass, asking each producer what he could do toward meeting the nation's needs for food and fiber. Farmers throughout the country voluntarily pledged to do their best to produce the amounts set forth in the farm plans which they had worked out with their AAA committeemen. National goals were broken down into state, parish and individual farm goals.

Agriculture set a good example by establishing goals as a yardstick for producing the right amount of the right commodity. In March Donald Nelson announced that the War Production Board would assign production quotas to primary war industries.

The farm program provides certain measures for achieving these adjustments in line with production goals. These are (1) acreage allotments which fit in with production goals and furnish a guide for planting the right acreage of the right crop, and (2) marketing quotas which place a limit on the marketing of crops of which large supplies are on hand. AAA payments are used in some cases to encourage production of needed crops and in other cases to encourage farmers to cut down surplus crops and substitute other crops that may be less profitable but more urgently needed. In addition, price support by the department provides an incentive for growing vital foods.

Achieving agriculture's 1942 production goals would not be possible were it not for the crops stored in the ever normal granary. Ever normal granary feed grains are being used to produce the urgently needed meats, eggs, milk, cheese and other high vitamin foods for our war demand.

Federal crop insurance protects up to 75 per cent of an insured farmer's average yield from crop losses from many unavoidable hazards, thus giving him an assured income, a new source of credit and enabling him to better plan his finances and his farm production program.

Lucas described the work of the farm program as an outstanding example of democracy in action.

GENERAL HODGES TO VISIT N. J. C.

Head Of Louisiana State University To Be Honor Guest Thursday

Honoring Gen. Campbell B. Hodges, president of Louisiana State university, the dean, faculty, staff and student body of Northeast Junior college will give a reception Thursday evening, May 14, from 8-10 o'clock in the Student Center building of the local college.

Invitations to attend are extended through this medium to everyone in the "Twin Cities," Ouachita parish, and Northeast Louisiana, Dean C. C. Colvert said. The occasion is being planned to offer an opportunity for citizens of this section and President Hodges to become better acquainted, Dr. Colvert explained. General Hodges has visited the college twice since he became president of L. S. U., but a full schedule allowed only short stays. He expressed a desire to make frequent visits in an effort to become better acquainted with the problems and needs of the college so that a close coordination between the University and the Monroe branch could exist.

Special committees that are making plans for the reception include: refreshments, Miss Frances Kelso and Mrs. Benton Holt; tea tables, Miss Louise Gray and Miss Hazel Mitchell; decorations, Miss Carrie Mae Stephenson, Miss Florence Young, Roy Henderson and A. B. Pitts; music, Roger C. Frisbie and Dallas Goss; contacting women's clubs, Miss Mary Clay; contacting civic clubs, W. R. Hammond; serving, Mrs. Dorothy Younse, Miss Ada Bess Hart, Miss May Read, Fred G. Thatcher and L. M. Norton. All members of the faculty and staff will assist in extending courtesies.

METHODISTS TO SEEK FOR GOAL

The First Methodist church plans a big Mother's day tribute this Sunday, when the building council seeks to raise $10,000 cash, or war bonds or stamps, to be applied to the educational building fund.

Last year $25,000 in cash was raised, and today, it is hoped to add $10,000 more, making a total of $35,000.

Many of the 1,600 members of this church have with extreme loyalty, and often sacrifice, saved up money to purchase war stamps and war bonds, to be donated to the church fund.

Today it is asked that each person bring his or her savings bank, war stamps, war bonds, or cash to church to invest in the fund.

Many people may have stamp books that are only partly filled out. It is suggested that these be brought in just the same and also any loose stamps can be surrendered, the name of the donor being given on an envelope so that proper credit can be assigned.

It is asked that when one attends Sunday school that stamps or cash be turned into the teacher or secretary, or it can be done at either the morning or evening service.

The pastor, Dr. A. M. Freeman, and the building committee, are highly hopeful that the goal of $10,000 be realized and perhaps even exceeded.

In closing her year of office as president, Mrs. McQuiller, at the meeting held the past week, reviewed the history of the club as it ends its first year here. She stated that she was proud of the work that has been accomplished in defense and other lines. She stated that members of the Pilot club must be leaders, must think clearly. She said that divine power should be sought to give hearts to love, arms to work, and bodies to bear life's burdens. She pointed out that club members should really serve. She then mentioned members of the club that have helped to make it a great success. In closing her remarks, Mrs. McQuiller left this philosophy of life:

"Grant us peace, the most precious gift, peace in our hearts, peace in our homes and enable each of us to be a messenger of peace to all the people of the earth. Guide our tongues from evil and our lips from uttering deceit and be our support when grief silences our heart and our comfort when woe bends our spirit. Plant humility in our souls that we may readily forgive."

JAPANESE PLANES RAID CHITTAGONG

Bombers Pound At Eastern Entryway Into Province Of Bengal

NEW DELHI, India, May 9.—(AP)—Japanese bombers, prospecting for new fields of conquest raided Chittagong, eastern entryway into the industrial province of Bengal, today for the second time in 24 hours, bringing relatively close to the great port of Calcutta the war that India has dreaded so long.

The raids were the third and fourth attacks of the war on the Indian mainland.

A high level bombing and machine gun attack upon Chittagong yesterday afternoon caused slight damage and some casualties, the British reported.

The results of the raid this morning were not announced hours after the bombers left.

The Japanese apparently were testing the defenses of Chittagong, which doubtless is among the early objectives of any advance into India proper. There was no confirmation, however, of vague Axis reports that enemy patrols already have penetrated India.

Chittagong, 165 miles northwest of Japanese occupied Akyab, Burma, lies at the extreme east of the vast Ganges delta of northeast India. On the western area of this delta, 376 miles by sea and 220 miles by air from Chittagong, lies Calcutta, presumably the ultimate objective of the Japanese if and when they attempt to move against the Indian homeland.

Bombs fell from Japanese planes on India proper for the first time last April 6 when two ports in the Madras presidency, Vizagapatam and Cocanada, were attacked.

Vizagapatam, nearer of the two ports to Calcutta, is 460 air miles southwest of that important city.

While the Japanese jabbed at India's defenses from the air, British Imperials eluded a Japanese trap in Burma and took up positions in the mountains near the Indian frontier.

A British communique said the Imperials withdrew successfully in the face of dive-bombing and machine-gunning attacks from the air. It declared that no contact was made with the Japanese land forces.

Of these aerial attacks, the British said that "little if any military damage was sustained, but it is feared that civilian refugees en route to India suffered casualties."

The British did not indicate where the harassed empire troops now stood beyond saying that the Japanese air force was "very active" in the Chindwin river area, which is northwest of Mandalay.

The R. A. F. again appeared in Burma where the Japanese from the b ginning of the campaign to seize t Allies chief lines of communicatio have had the advantage. But t communique mentioned only reco naissance flight by the British pilo

To the east, the Japanese report occupation of Myitkina, terminus a railway from Mandalay to Rango presumably completing the seizure that strategic line.

Japanese reports also said Kinu, miles north of Mandalay on the ra way to Myitkina, was captured Thu day.

Tokyo also reported that the Ja nese are driving northward fr Lungling, 50 miles inside China's Y nan province from the Burma bor The Japanese said a machine gun tack demolished more than 55 Chin trucks in the vicinity of Hweitu bridge on the Nu river, more than miles northeast of Lungling.

One hatchery sold 200,000 and 8,000 were sold in this parish. The club members sold $8,342 worth of poultry and eggs this year, with about 1,700 turkeys yet to sell.

Food for defense is causing nutrition and food preservation to come to the front this year and will continue to grow in importance. The agent is chairman of the parish nutrition committee with about 150 on this committee with her. Mrs. McQuiller discussed on the radio the value of enriched flour. The food conserved by the women was valued at $41,267.68 this year.

In home furnishings, the triple A mattress program has been carried out this year and also a comforter program.

In the 15-minute program given each month at club meetings to home agricultural economics, has been specially helpful. Cooperation has been extended all United States agencies working in this area, to all civic and service clubs, federated groups, P.-T. A. and varied business groups.

Achievement days were held in 13 home demonstration clubs and one parish-wide achievement day featured a cotton dress contest. Each year the home demonstration agent entertains all farm women planning on attending farm and home week. She also entertains the presidents of all the clubs where plans for the year's work is discussed.

Another feature of entertainment is the luncheon the agent has each year for members of the Ten-Year club.

The council sent four representatives to the national council meeting at Nashville, Tenn., and the council paid the expenses of four club women and the county agent accompanied them to the state farm bureau meeting in Baton Rouge.

Farm demonstration work was started in Ouachita parish in 1909 and cooperative extension work started July 1, 1941. Mrs. McQuiller is the fourth home demonstration agent. Others in their order were: Miss Mamie Miller, Miss Amy Holmes, Miss Fannie Buie.

A number of assistant home demonstration agents have aided Mrs. McQuiller in times past. In 1940, Miss Elizabeth Whatley was sent for training and was later appointed permanent assistant agent. She served until April, 1941, when Mrs. Doris Braden exchanged parishes with Miss Whatley.

A number of negro home demonstration agents have also been trained by Mrs. McQuiller.

Mrs. McQuiller has ever been a vital force in community and civic life and it was but natural that when the Pilot club was formed here a year ago, she was named the first president. She performed a great service for the club and the community in this connection.

She is a member of the honorary fraternity Epsilon Sigma Phi and other similar organizations. This is a club which admits members who have had 10 years of continuous home demonstration service in Louisiana.

Mrs. McQuiller is pleased to be able to secure quarters for the continuance of her work where sufficient space will be given to carry on activities to better advantage. She anticipates that with wartime conditions prevailing, that facilities will be taxed to the utmost and that the new building will prove none too large for increased efforts that will be required.

Mrs. McQuiller's spacious home at 2704 South Grand street is frequently the scene of meetings and social times for club members, who regard her as the outstanding leader in fact as well as in name in her diversified roles.

Mrs. McQuiller is married, her husband being C. B. McQuiller. They are parents of Carolyn McQuiller, a student in Northeast Junior College.

Local Agricultural Extension Office Aids National Project

Poultry improvement work in Ouachita parish is part of the national program for breed improvement and disease control that is being carried on at the present time in some 44 states.

The College of Agriculture of L. S. U. and the agricultural extension service, the Louisiana Livestock Sanitary board are all cooperating in carrying out the practices of the national poultry improvement program in Louisiana.

The contact with the hatcheries and flock owners in the different parishes is made through the county and home demonstration agents in parishes where these people are located. The agricultural extension office cooperates with the Louisiana poultry program by working out a schedule for flock selection and testing work in the parish.

The Louisiana poultry improvement program has made a constant growth since it was started five years ago with eight hatcheries and 250 Pullorum tested flock owners for the hatching season of 1942 the program has grown to include 43 approved hatcheries and 1,176 United States Pullorum tested flocks. In Ouachita parish we have two of the United States approved hatcheries with a hatching capacity of 60,000 with 32 flocks in the parish furnishing hatching eggs to these hatcheries. Approximately 150,000 baby chicks were purchased by farm people in Ouachita parish and they carried on the grow-healthy-chick program as outlined by the agricultural extension service.

Approximately 425 home-made lamp brooders are in use in Ouachita parish built from plans furnished by the agricultural extension service. This method of breeding chicks has almost revolutionized the method of brooding chicks on the farms in this section of the state.

It is estimated that some 20,000 of the home-made lamp brooders are used by farm people throughout Louisiana, and some 140,000 in use throughout the south. Plans for this home-made lamp brooder were designed by Clyde Ingram, extension poultry man, of L. S. U., and have been distributed through the agricultural extension service.

Ninety-seven 4-H club members enrolled in poultry projects last year and 2,922 chicks were handled. It has been estimated that Louisiana farmers are producing better than 800 cases of market eggs per week which represents approximately $200,000.00 per month paid to farmers for eggs.

Another concrete evidence of the value of our poultry improvement program in Louisiana is the fact that this year Louisiana has attracted an egg-drying plant in the state. We have at the present time, the Louisiana Egg Products Company, located at Ruston, and has equipment and is able to dry 800 cases of eggs a day. It is possible to take a case of eggs weighing 54 to 56 pounds and dry it down to 10 pounds of dried eggs, still retaining their food value. These dried eggs are being shipped to England and Russia as part of our food for freedom program.

Through the work of the county and home demonstration agent's office, a cash market has been provided in West Monroe where farmers can sell any number of eggs at the highest market price for cash. A cash market is provided for as low as one dozen to as high as a case lot, from the producer.

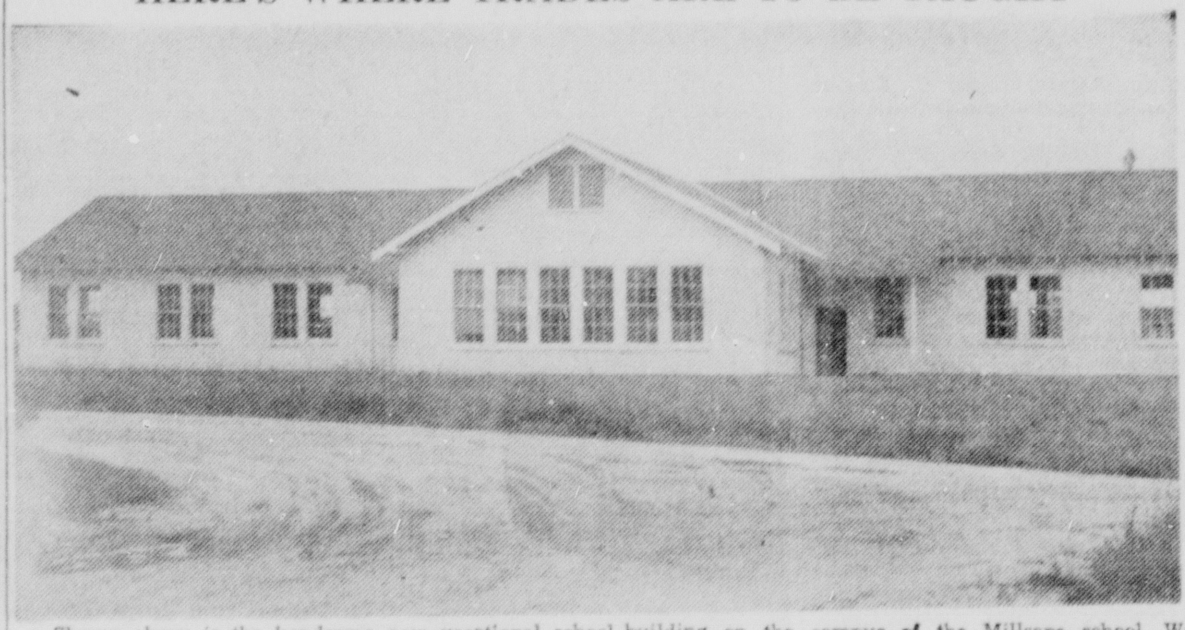
HERE'S WHERE TRADES ARE TO BE TAUGHT



Shown above is the handsome new vocational school building on the campus of the Millsaps school, West Monroe, which represents a total investment by the parish school board and government of more than $40,000. Here men and women can learn trades that are essential for the winning of the war.

THE DELICATE ART OF WELDING

Above is a view in the interior of the welding school located near the new vocational school building on the campus of the Millsaps school, West Monroe. This school has been in operation for a year and has turned out many graduates who are filling important posts in warfare construction.

Trade School Trains For Defense And For Vocation

Enlarged Plant Will Enable Many To Prepare For Wartime Jobs

Crowning efforts of the Ouachita parish school board, in conjunction with the Louisiana board of education and the United States office of education, there is being established a war defense vocational school on the campus of the Millsaps school, West Monroe, which is full of promise for those desiring to learn trades.

The large new building which has been in process of erection for the past several months and which has cost, with building and equipment, a total of nearly $40,000, was turned over to the school board a few days ago as completed. It is a structure of frame material, with heavy cement floor. Its shape is that of a large cross, and the four shops all are large and with plenty or outside lighting. One large room is devoted to sheet metal work, another to an adequate machine shop; a third is an electrical shop while a ship fitting shop is arranged in the fourth large room.

Offices and washrooms and other sanitary facilities are well provided for. As yet the new plant is not fully equipped as machinery is not all here, but additions are being received every day and Walter M. Crofton, vocational director for the parish schools, expects to be ready to operate completely in a few days time.

Vocational instruction has been in progress for the past year in a sheet iron building located immediately south of the new industrial school building devoted to welding, which may be regarded as indicative of possibilities for the entire plant when in full operation.

The course in welding requires from 12 to 16 weeks to complete. To be admitted to the welding school there are no special advanced educational requirements but one must be industrially employable. Ages may be from 18 years up, those in the forties being in these times not debarred. They must be in deferred classifications as regards army service.

Women will be admitted to the school, Mr. Crofton said, for the government realizes that it must build up a backlog of workers to replace men who go into service. As yet no women have been enrolled but they will be later admitted, but all admissions to courses are through the Louisiana State Employment Service at 230 South Grand street, Monroe.

Up to the present, 137 have completed the welding course and of these, 100 have been placed in defense positions. Others are probably employed but there is no record of where they may have gone to enter into employment.

In addition to the large investment of equipment, all made by the federal government, fully $10,000 is represented by the machine facilities in the welding plant.

Thirty-six hours a week are required of all who are training for defense activities, Mr. Crofton said. The welding shop operates in continuous shifts day and night, being closed down only from midnight Saturday to midnight Sunday.

With the newly-installed shops placed in full operation, and with continuous day and night shifts, it will now be possible to care for 320 students at one time, the director stated.

The time was, a short time ago, Mr. Crofton said, that a man of 40 or more was regarded too old for a job. But with the new wartime conditions existing, such men are eagerly sought for to fill positions in defense plants. A man may have lost, for example, several fingers from a hand; he may have a hernia; or other slight disa[illegible] but he may still be in physical condition doubtless where he can find a place to work.

In times past, women have asked to be permitted to take courses in welding, but this originally was not regarded with favor. Now conditions have changed and the services of women are to be increasingly sought as the war progresses.

The Ouachita parish school board paid for the erection of the buildings on the Millsaps school campus and the equipment is provided from the government.

Mr. Crofton said that the Ouachita parish police jury and the city of West Monroe have been extremely helpful in connection with the vocational project. The city of West Monroe has hardsurfaced the street leading to the buildings. The grounds are still in the rough but are to be landscaped and greatly improved by beautification, but all this will require some time.

Mr. Crofton is aided by four instructors in welding and one each in the various shops that are being operated. He came to Monroe to assume his present position with the parish school board on April 18, 1941. He had previously been engaged in similar vocational work in Crowley, La. He is a graduate of Rice University and has had extensive previous experience along his chosen line. Much of the success to date of the vocational work is attributed to him and to his constant efforts in endeavoring to build up for the community a trade school that will fill a very definite requirement for North Louisiana. He anticipates that the school will grow rapidly and prove its worth in fitting men and women for definite places in wartime and after the war in contributing to relieve the unemployment situation in this part of the state.

possibility of any such German-Japanese contact, as well as having fortified Allied supply lines in the Indian ocean and helped forestall an Axis drive in Libya.

Whether these Russian and British analyses are well founded, time alone will tell. They certainly mark, however, so decided a change of tone as to be noteworthy.

London also discloses that simultaneously with the Madagascar operation strong reinforcements were landed in Ceylon.

Just where the British troops used for this Madagascar operation or those dispatched to Ceylon came from is unrevealed. Some probably were direct from England where the American expeditionary force in North Ireland has made possible the release of British troops for duty elsewhere.

The bulk of both expeditions, however, probably came from the British command in Egypt and the near and middle east and represents factually the same conclusion stated by the London authority; that there is no longer serious danger threatening Egypt from Libya; that the Axis effort to build up a major offensive or even an important diversion front there has definitely failed.

4-H Club Members Make Fine Record With Calves

Several Awards Won At Annual State Stock Show At Baton Rouge

Ouachita parish 4-H club members along with their other crop and livestock projects are making a very interesting and worthy record with their beef cattle program. The boys and girls engaged in this project are making a contribution to the national defense effort, helping to correct the lack of balance between crops and livestock and at the same time bringing in a little cash to help meet the expenses for a high school and college education.

The growth of this project, since its beginning in Ouachita parish in 1939, has been steady and on a sound business and farm management basis. Improvement in quality of animals being fed as well as growth of the club members in the knowledge of proper care, feeding and breeding practices that must be followed, has been rapid as evidenced by the showing made by their calves in the state show held recently in Baton Rouge. Over 275 calves from all sections of Louisiana were shown at the state show. Ouachita parish club members exhibited eleven of that number and every calf shown by the local boys and girls placed in the money.

The parish group placed first as a group, nosing out such groups as East Baton Rouge, Caddo and Rapides, who followed in that order. Everett Zeagler, who is a senior in Ouachita Parish High school, and feeding his third year, placed first in the medium weight group with one calf and won a $50.00 prize in capturing the northeast Louisiana district champion with his other entry. T. A. Calloway, a student in Northeast Junior college, who was also feeding for his third year, had the best pen of three calves for which he received a $25.00 premium and the reserve district champion, which earned him a $25.00 premium. Other club members who won premiums were: John Landrum—8th place, $22.00; Elizabeth Landrum, 3rd place, $27.00; Ray Lebo of Claiborne school, 4th place, winning $26.00; Charles Petrus, Crosley school, 19th place winning $11.00; Glen Jones of Watson club, 24th place, winning $7.00; and Buddy Willis, of the Eureka club, 29th place, winning $5.00.

The project was started under supervision of county agent, D. L. Bornman, Jr., in 1939. That year with the assistance of the business men who financed the project in its beginning, eight calves were fed and all had to be purchased from Texas because local animals were not of sufficient quality. By following the practice of buying cows of high quality, the parish group this year was composed almost entirely of calves raised in the parish. Club members now own 49 head of these high quality females which will serve as a source of good cattle in future years. The club members enjoy a perfect record of paying every cent they have borrowed promptly when due and all the projects were financed. The past season the Production Credit association financed all the projects and in every case the club member has sufficient income to clear all notes and in a very large percentage of cases, enough additional to give a good profit on the feed fed.

The project is successful on farms where feed is grown in excess of farm and home needs and where good pastures have been developed.

Success of the project has been partly due to cooperation of the business men of the twin cities, who financed it in its early stages and who assisted the boys in marketing their animals at a fair price.

Several of the grocery and meat establishments have bought animals each year and sold them over their counters. Eureka Grocery store No. 2 purchased 14 of the 33 calves fed in 1942 and report that their customers who demand quality meat, praise the quality of the 4-H club meat handled. Repeat demands was responsible for them using such a large number of the animals.

The Louisiana Power and Light Company Lunch club, the Federal Compress and Warehouse company, Brice's Market and Sears, Roebuck and company who paid 18¼ cents per pound for a total of $179.79 for the northeast Louisiana champion, were other Monroe firms who bought Ouachita parish calves.

Plans are now being formulated to increase and improve the work for 1942.

Three men from the 106th cavalry, Camp Livingston, will broadcast from KMLB, Sunday at 12:30 p. m. to tell the people what men in the army think of USO.

Much of the money that is raised will be expended here for the establishment of a complete USO clubhouse for service men who are located here. With the large airport development assured for Monroe a large number of men in service will be assigned here, and a large and well equipped USO is regarded as positively required.

Announcement in Friday's News-Star of the approval of Monroe for the location of a USO clubhouse was met with wide approval. To make it a complete success, the public will be asked to be generous in their contributions.

Mr. Kellogg stated that in view of Monroe's prospects that there should be no difficulty in securing the sum assigned as the quota of Ouachita parish.

DAWKINS URGES NEW LAW CODE

if it is adopted and will be a vast improvement on the present hodgepodge of statutes.

"The new code will make it possible quickly to locate offenses in law and to determine punishments. Naturally some phases may be opposed by some lawyers, but there should be little difficulty in any smoothing off that may be necessary by the legislature. Such errors as may exist can easily be remedied by the legislature.

"What I hope most sincerely is that the legislature does not get into a hopeless snarl over some one angle of the code and thus fail to act on it as a whole.

"I have written all of my state senators and state representatives urging that action be taken and that snarls be avoided."

Dr. Smith, in discussing the code, said:

"Strangely enough, we are still operating under the Crimes Act of 1805, which is now aided and abetted by a veritable host of statutes enacted by each successive legislature since that year. It seems not inaccurate or unfair to say that most of the statutes making up this mass of legislation were enacted haphazardly without reference to each other and without any purpose of achieving a simple, understandable system of criminal offenses.

"Many efforts have been made to create order where none has existed. Edward Livingston's proposed penal code for Louisiana which, incidentally, took him three years to prepare, (starting in 1820) working alone, brought him world renown.

"Further attempts were made to improve the situation in 1855 and through the revised statutes of 1870; but nothing of permanent good resulted. In 1896 Governor Foster appointed a criminal code commission, and in 1908 a similar commission was appointed by Governor Sanders. The report of neither commission was adopted. The need for a comprehensive criminal code was recognized in the constitutions of 1898, 1913, and 1921, through a provision in each authorizing the legislature to adopt a criminal code in a manner to be designated by it. Prior to Act 7 of 1940 the latest attempt to overcome the deficiencies of our criminal law was an Act of 1936 authorizing the appointment of a commission to prepare a draft of a criminal code to be submitted to the legislature in 1938. This attempt failing, the authority was extended by an act of the 1938 legislature looking toward the submission of the draft in 1940.

"Again the attempt failed, and then followed Act 7 of 1940 authorizing the institute to prepare such a draft. The institute has done so. This may be credited largely to the fact that it was in a position to avail itself of the services of members of the law schools. Please do not think I suggest that law professors are not busy men. They most certainly are; but at the same time they are not subject to the innumerable interruptions that plague the practitioner—telephones constantly ringing; clients to coddle; petitions and briefs to prepare; witnesses to interview; appearances to make; and so on. At any rate, a vision has become real.

"As a state noted for its civil code, it is anomalous that in the field of criminal law Louisiana has lagged behind the progress toward codification in other states. I do not mean to suggest that there exists in any other state of the union a code of criminal law that would be comparable to the new Louisiana criminal code, if adopted. The Louisiana State law institute was instructed by the legislature to prepare a draft of a criminal code, not a compilation of criminal statutes. The institute and its reporters have been faithful to this mandate. The reporters chosen were Clarence Morrow of the Tulane law school, Leon Sarpy of the Loyola law school, and Dale E. Bennett of the Louisiana State university law school. To counsel and assist them there was appointed an advisory committee consisting of judges, district attorneys and practicing lawyers learned in the criminal law. The scholar's training in research and in considering a subject from a broad point of view has been blended with the practical experience of years spent in active contact with the pulse of the people in the daily affairs.

"Before beginning the actual work of drafting, the reporters made a comprehensive survey of the criminal statutes and jurisprudence of Louisiana, and of many other jurisdictions both here and abroad. Assistance was solicited and secured from men throughout the country who may be considered as experts in the field. With this background, the reporters prepared a general outline consisting of several titles under which provisions of the code would be arranged in orderly fashion. In the actual work of drafting, they were guided by two main ideas. First, to preserve the present law was far as they could soundly do so, and second, to prepare a true code, not a compilation of existing statutes. Simple and understandable definitions have been laboriously worked out to take the place of an utter absence of definition except through the common law of England, and to supplant the conflicting, inconsistent, incomplete, and overlapping definitions of independent criminal statutes dealing with single offenses or only partially reaching a problem needing solution. As an example of the latter, there are over fifty present statutes covering larceny, fraud and false dealing. To detail the instances of confusion and overlapping of this sort would not be justified at this time. There are, of course, many present statutes that have been excellently drawn. In such cases their language has been adopted only with changes necessary to fit it into the code. The reporters have followed well their charge to make no changes for the sake of change alone. A code must not contain, as far as feasible, lengthy enumerations. They can be encountered ad nauseum in existing legislation. Most of them have no proper place in a code and consequently have been omitted. The aim has been to define in simple general terms broad enough to cover all intended situations and yet specific enough to avoid ambiguity and to apprise all who may wish to know of the conduct covered.

"All that the institute could hope for would be that before condemning any of the provisions of the proposed code the existing statutes on the point be consulted. It is believed that in nearly all such cases such a procedure will dispel any doubt that may be raised. Of course the institute does not claim that it has attained perfection. It does believe that its work has been well done. Its three reporters, assisted by their advisers and by the council of the institute, and indeed by the general assembly of the institute, have labored with every facility at their command for a period of about two years. There is not a provision in the code that has not been the subject of careful scrutiny. Two years is not so short a time when compared with Edward Livingston's single-handed production, in only three years, of a Code of Crimes and Punishments, a Code of Procedure, a Code of Evidence, a Code of Reform and Prison Discipline, and a Book of Definitions. When considering the institute's draft it is hoped that members of the legislature will not forget that their's is the opportunity of over a century."

Brooklyn's Bark Worse Than Bite

MacPhail Says Dodgers Are Really Peace-Loving Aggregation

NO QUARREL WITH FRICK

Confusion And Noise Of His Brood Just Extra Pep, He Insists

By Judson Bailey

BROOKLYN, May 9.—(AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers cause a lot of confusion and make a lot of noise, but they really are a peace-loving people, President Leland Stanford MacPhail insisted today.

"I've been hearing that I am feuding with Ford Frick about the National league's new rule against managers arguing with umpires and about our players going around making trouble all the time," he declared in his best booming baritone, "but that's a lot of bosh."

"Actually I am in entire agreement with Frick on his rule. No manager can sit in a dugout and judge a ball or a strike and I never heard any of them say they could. Therefore, it is silly for them to be running out on the field all the time arguing and delaying the game.

"I have talked to the president of the National league about this only once. That was after Manager Leo Durocher, Whit Wyatt, Dolph Camilli and Fred Fitzsimmons all were thrown out of the game in St. Louis by Ziggy Sears.

"Now as soon as I found out players like Wyatt, Fitzsimmons and Camilli were thrown out I figured something was wrong because those fellows don't get thrown out of a game once in five years.

"So I called Frick and asked him what had happened and I asked him if the umpire had ordered Durocher out of the game before he came up to the plate and said anything, just on the umpire's assumption that my manager was going to put on a scene. Frick didn't know, because he read me the umpire's report and it didn't say.

"But he agreed with me that an umpire has no right to throw somebody out for what he reads in his mind and I agreed with him that if Durocher went up to the plate and talked to the catcher in an effort to embarrass the umpire, then he should have been ordered out.

"Well, is that a feud? I have a reputation as a feudist," he said with a broad grin spreading over his freckled face, "so now anytime I talk to anyone people say I've got a new feud.

"That's the way it is with our ball club. We're supposed to be troublemakers, yet we hadn't had a player ordered out of a game this season till that rumpus at St. Louis and last year we didn't have any put out of a game before the Fourth of July.

"And here's something else. In their entire major league careers Camilli has only been put out three times and Wyatt and Fitzsimmons twice. They have a combined service of about 40 years in the major leagues and have only been banished seven times. You wouldn't call them chronic squawkers, would you?"

"We've got a scrappy ball club and that's what I want. But we aren't 'feudists'."

TIDE THINCLADS IN VICTORY OVER STATE

Alabama Ace Suffers Injury In Costly Triumph

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., May 9.—(AP)—The Alabama track team defeated Mississippi State here today 73-58 but probably lost the services of its champion quarter miler, Jack Boswell.

The Tide senior dash man, counted on to pick up points for the Tide in the conference meet in Birmingham next week, pulled a thigh muscle in the 220 yard dash today as he was leading State's ace sprinter, Blondy Black, with about 50 yards to go in the event.

Coach Harold (Red) Drew said the former Ensley, Ala., high school star would not be able to run next week.

The meet was closer than the final score indicated as the Tide held a scant six-point lead with only two events left. The Crimson thinclads, however, won a first and second in the 220-yard low hurdles with Chuck McDonald and Wilmer Parker running one-two and Tom Rast picked up a second in the broad jump. Alabama also won the mile relay.

Bob Stevens, State miler, cracked his own school record in his specialty by leading the pack all the way to finish in 4 minutes 23.2 seconds, clipping one and five-tenths seconds from his old mark.

ARMY TAKES TOP S'EAST SLUGGER

Fred Reinhart Of Meridian Dons Khaki With Bat Mark Of .439

MOBILE, Ala., May 9.—(AP)—Fred Reinhart, Meridian outfielder, won't appear again in the Southeastern averages. Fred has swapped his baseball flannel for army khaki. But he left something to be remembered by.

Last thing before reporting to the army, he took over the league batting lead with a fat average of .439—six points ahead of Montgomery's injured star, Joe Yourkovich. Infielder Charles Quimby, also of Montgomery, stood third in home news bureau averages for the week ending May 5, with .417; pitcher-outfielder Bill Barisoff of Anniston fourth at .395; and catcher-manager Bill Cronin of Montgomery fifth at .393.

Barisoff grabbed the lead in total bases with 35, and in triples, with four, while Cronin had most hits, 22. Marion DeJarnett led the league with 15 runs and Hugh Holliday of Anniston set the pace in runs batted in at 17. Joe Cavosie of Jackson was top man in homers at 5.

Jackson's .274 was the league's best team batting, while Montgomery led in fielding at .984, and in double plays at 20.

Southpaw Jimmy McClure of Jackson, with four wins in as many starts, led the pitchers. Goat Walker of Montgomery has won three straight, and Hanrahan of Mobile two. McClure leads in strikeouts with 30 in 40 innings pitched.

Averages omitted the double-header between Anniston and Pensacola May fifth.

CLASH FOR TITLE MONDAY

NEW ORLEANS, May 9.—(AP)—Peters and Holy Cross of New Orleans will meet here Monday in the finals of the state high school baseball tournament.

Ex-Teammates Meet Again As Rival Pilots

MILWAUKEE, May 9.—(AP)—Charley Grimm and Leo (Gabby) Hartnett, a couple of the boys who directed the Chicago Cubs to the only championships they have won in the last decade, have formed a mutual admiration society.

But its strictly off the playing field, mind you.

In the American association, where both are showing their wares these days, there's a bitter feud developing between these two former members of the Chicago Cub organization.

"Gabby is the greatest catcher the majors ever saw," says Charley, "but we're going to knock his club smack off the field every time we meet it."

"Grimm's a great guy and the finest manager I've ever worked for," says Gabby, "but he's going to be wishing he was back on his Missouri farm, playing banjo selections to his horses when we get through pushing his club around."

Grimm, manager of the Milwaukee Brewers, and Hartnett, leader of the Indianapolis Indians, met on a playing field for the first time Friday since Hartnett succeeded Grimm as manager of the Cubs in 1938.

Charley managed the Cubs from 1932 through half of the 1938 season. His 1932 club won the National league title, as did his 1935 squad. Gabby was Grimm's first string catcher through that period.

In 1938 Grimm was moved out in favor of Hartnett and Gabby led the Cubs to a championship. Two years later he was replaced by Jimmy Wilson.

Now they're fighting one another in the association. The Brewers were one-half game out of first place before today's play, Indianapolis, a fast, hustling club, not far behind—and there's a long season ahead.

Grimm drew first blood Friday in the first meeting of the teams as the Brewers beat the Tribe by a 6-to-5 score.

FIVE-MONTHS SEARCH ENDS

Former Pitt Star New Yale Coach

By Lou Black

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 9.—(AP)—A five-month search for a "youthful, up and coming head football coach" ended at Yale today when the university's corporation approved the selection of Howard (Howie) Odell, of Sioux City, Iowa, 31-year-old former University of Pittsburgh star, as Emerson (Spike) Nelson's successor.

Odell, whose qualifications met with the rigid standards demanded by the recommending graduate football advisory committee headed by Edwin F. Blair of New York City, was among scores of coaches and prospects who were interviewed for the job of removing Yale from the gridiron doghouse.

The new mentor, the Eli's third head coach in three years—Raymond W. (Ducky) Pond in 1940 and Nelson in 1941—was given a one-year contract, and although his salary was not disclosed, the usual starting fee has been between $6,000 and $7,000.

Odell, assistant football coach at the University of Wisconsin, and prior to that at Pitt, where he launched his career shortly after graduation in 1935; Harvard and the University of Pensylvania, was reported to have been the unanimous choice of the graduate advisory football committee, the university's board of athletic control and the corporation.

Athletic Director Ogden D. Miller, looking as though he had been relieved of a long headache, greeted Odell's apointment by stating he was "delighted" with the selection.

Odell is the second non-Yale man to become head coach here. Nelson, whose 1941 eleven lost seven of eight games, was the first. Like Nelson, Odell, one of the youngest and least experienced men ever selected to boss a major college football team, is a native of Iowa.

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, Baltimore, May 9.—(AP)—Alsab came back today.

With the same thunder in his legs and iron in his heart that carried him to greatness a year ago, the little colt roared down Pimlico's stretch to win the classic Preakness Stakes and end the jinx on him all this year.

He did it the hard way, too, as a record crowd of 42,000 fans roared him on. He came from far back and on the outside to run over eight of the nine other horses in the field in the last quarter mile and finish on top by a length. The others tried gamely but couldn't withstand his sprint.

He couldn't have come down to the $58,175 pot of gold at the finish any faster. He was flying, because this ended all the disappointments which accompanied his eight straight losing races this year. He had skyrocketed to the top of the heap in 1941, winner of 15 races, ten in a row, and was classed by many in the same league with Man O'War.

So with all that riding on this 52nd edition of Maryland's turf classic, he smashed over the finish line in 1 minute, 57 seconds, chopping a full second-and-a-fifth from the stake record High Quest set in 1934.

There was no question about this one. Alsab was a clean length on top at the wire, while Ben Whitaker's Requested from Texas and Warren Wright's Sun Again, the big youngster who was a doubtful starter until two hours before post-time, battled it out for second honors.

They hit the tape so close, first neck and neck, then head and head and finally nose and nose on the wire that not even the camera could split them and they finished in a dead heat. A length back of them came Maryland's pride, R. Sterling Clark's Colchis.

Half a length back of him was last week's Kentucky Derby hero—Shut Out. The son of Equipoise, half of Mrs. Payne Whitney's one-two punch in this year's big stakes, had little of his Kentucky class this time. He couldn't keep up in the early going, failed again at the finish and was a well-walloped fifth.

The dismal failures trailed behind the leading set. Fair Call, owned by Mrs. Barclay Douglas, of Long Island, was sixth; Emerson F. Woolward's Valdina Orphan, the long-legged Texan who ran third in the Derby, was seventh; Mrs. Whitney's "glamor boy," Devil Diver, supposed to be better than Shut Out, stopped cold and was eighth; William Woodward's Apace was a tired ninth after cutting out the pace for three-quarters of a mile, and the English-bred Domingo, from the barn of movie-man Louis B. Mayer, chased all the others home.

Although he was second to Shut Out a week ago, even the bettors knew Alsab was hot today. They backed him down to the favorite's slot at $2.05 to $1 and let the Whitney double-threat ride at $2.40 to $1.

This biggest crowd ever to jam Old Hilltop poured money into the mutuel machines. A total of $240,353 was bet on the Preakness alone, nearly equalling the $250,000 record set in this same race when Man O'Mar won it.

Basil James, part of the 126 pounds aboard the son of Good Goods, let Alsab run just as he pleased for nearly a mile, as first Apache then Requested led the parade.

When they headed into the far turn, the 24-year-old "fire cracker" from Sunnyside, Washington, clucked "let's go"—and away they went. Far on the outside, the Chicago champion came winging. He didn't pass 'em—he ran right over them

"I knew I was home at the quarter pole," James said later. "He was a great horse today."

For old Sarge Swenke, who trained the colt, it was more than a triumph—it was taking the big one where his old neighbors could lean out of their windows and see it. For Sarge was born only a couple of blocks away from Pimlico.

None of the others had any excuses. Eddie Arcaro, who chose the wrong Whitney horse to ride in the Derby last week—picking Devil Diver instead of Shut Out and stayed right with his choice today—summed it up for all the boys.

"There just weren't any excuses," he pointed out in the jockey's room—the other boys nodded agreement.

In picking up $58,175 for his first victory this year "The Sab" boosted his all-time earnings to $182,075.

Along with the pay checks, Al Sabath, the Chicago lawyer and husband of the owner, took the famous Woodlawn vase with him. He left for Chicago right after the race to tell Mrs. Sabath, who is ill, all about it.

Alsab will go to Belmont Park Tuesday to run in the Withers and Belmont Stakes.

In the dead-heat for second back of Alsab, a couple of come-backers also staked a claim to a small share of the honors. Requested, knocked around and roughed up to finish 14th in the Derby, showed today that was no indication of his gameness and class. He took the lead for a while in the stretch and split $15,000 with Sun Again for second and third money.

The dead heat was the first in the 61 years history of the Preakness and the judges studied the photograph so long some of the folks thought they might have been looking at a double feature.

The deadlock turned up some peculiar odds in the place and show pools, although Alsab was $3.70 in the second "hole," and $3.40 in third. Requested was $6.10 for place and $8.70 for show and Sun Again was $4.00 and $5.10.

Harridge Outlines Plan For Eight Benefit Tilts

President Of American League Predicts Loop Will Contribute $375,000 To Army And Navy Relief Funds Through Program Of Championship Games

CHICAGO, May 9.—(AP)—President Will Harridge of the American League predicted today that the league would contribute $375,000 to the army and navy relief funds.

Harridge made this estimate in outlining a program in which the baseball clubs will play eight regular championship games to raise funds for the families of the men in the nation's armed forces. The first of these war effort games is set for May 23 when the New York Yankees engage Washington in the nation's capital, and Boston's slugging Red Sox play host to Philadelphia.

The last will be played August 22 with Washington at New York and Boston at Philadelphia. Meantime on May 25 Chicago will play at Cleveland and Detroit at St. Louis, while on June 30 St. Louis will engage the Tigers at Detroit. On July 2 Cleveland battles the White Sox at Chicago.

"The cause speaks for itself and I'm confident the fans will turn out in force," President Harridge said. "Every cent—the gross gate receipts from each game—will go to these worthy funds. There will be a 'closed' sign on the pass gate and club office employes, ground workers, umpires, newspaper and radio men and telegraph operators all will contribute by paying their way. It's a golden opportunity for fans who like their baseball.

"This program is a challenge to each city in our league to show that its baseball fans can do their share in the game's determination to do everything it can toward helping win the war, every game will be an all-out effort—and newspaper and radio men throughout the league have given their assurance of promoting and publicizing the program. With their aid, the attendance can be added justification of President Roosevelt's faith in our national pastime.

"Army and navy relief officials, when the program first was presented, asked that the games be played as early as the schedule would permit, hence the games this month. In arranging the program, we were faced with numerous schedule conflicts and the lineup agreed upon by the clubs, I believe, will give every city a good battle and an equal chance to make a good financial showing for a great cause.

"The receipts from our games and those of the National league contests will be tremendously augmented, of course, by the all-star program in which the all-star teams will play at New York and the winner meet with the all-service team in Cleveland."

DANNY MURTAUGH SWINGS LARGE BAT

Sophomore Boasts Average Of .359 But Phils Rest In Cellar

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP)—The Philadelphia Phils are resting deep in the heart of the National league cellar, as has been their custom in recent years, but they boast the circuit's leading hitter today in Danny Murtaugh, a sophomore second baseman.

Murtaugh, who joined the Phils during the 1941 season from Houston of the Texas league, wrested the leadership from Nanny Fernandez of the Boston Braves during the past week and up to Saturday's games had an average of .359, based on 25 hits in 58 trips to the plate.

Fernandez dropped to second place with .351 after setting the pace with .372 a week ago, when Murtaugh was tied with Enos Slaughter of St. Louis for third place.

Dixie Walker of the Brooklyn Dodgers now is in third place with an average of .349, the same figure that landed him in second a week ago. Pete Reiser of the Dodgers, the league's batting champion of 1941, pulled into fourth place during the week with .325, entering the top ten among hitters with 40 or more times at bat for the first time this season.

Others in that select circle include Ray Sanders, St. Louis, .324; Lennie Merullo, Chicago, .321; Jimmy Brown, St. Louis, .314; Slaughter, .314; Jim Wasdell, Pittsburgh, .313, and Bert Haas, Cincinnati, .304.

Fernandez has connected for 34 hits to lead the circuit in that department. He also tops the list in doubles with ten. A four-way tie for second in total hits includes Brown, Reiser and Billy Herman of the Dodgers and Bob Elliott of Pittsburgh, each with 27. Sanders and Walker are tied for second in doubles with seven each.

Manager Mel Ott of the New York Giants has scored 18 runs, one more than his closest rival, Stan Musial of the Cardinals.

Cincinnati's Frank McCormick tops the list in runs batted in with 23, while Brown is second with 22.

With the season nearly a month old, no player in the league has hit more than two triples. Those who have tripled twice are Haas, Brown, Stan Benjamin and Ben Warren of Philadelphia, Stu Martin and Elliott of Pittsburgh, and Lou Stringer, Bill Nicholson and Charley Gilbert of Chicago.

Dolph Camilli of the Dodgers hit his first home run of the week yesterday and his seventh of the season to maintain a margin of one over his closest rival, Frank McCormick, who also hit his first four-bagger of the week yesterday.

Murtaugh, Fernandez and Boston's Eddie Miller are tied for the lead in stolen bases with four each.

Ed Head, Brooklyn rookie, is pacing the pitchers with three victories and no defeats, while Rip Sewell of Pittsburgh boasts four wins and only one loss.

COTTON BOWL RESERVED FOR S'WEST CHAMPION

DALLAS, Tex., May 9.—(AP)—The Southwest conference football champion either will play in the Cotton Bowl or not appear in any bowl game under a rule passed by the faculty committee at its spring meeting today.

Six of the seven members voted to commit the champion to the Dallas classic. The other member, the University of Texas, did not join in the movement, pointing to a faculty rule of its own that prohibits post-season football games.

BRITISH KEEP ON POUNDING NAZIS

Big Bombers Return In Blistering Attack On Rostock Area

LONDON, May 9.—(AP)—With the avowed intention of smashing Nazi submarine nests and the German air force as the necessary preliminary to invasion of the continent, the heaviest British bombers returned in a blistering assault on the ravaged Rostock area along the Baltic last night, the air ministry announced today.

From 400 and 800 foot levels the big war birds bombed Warnemuende, leaving fires sweeping an aircraft plant and other objectives in that area, but 10 miles from Rostock for which it is both a port and seaplane base. The Germans announced that Rostock also was bombed again, indicating that the British raid had spread over all the busy Baltic war supply center.

The big Lancasters, Manchesters, Wellingtons, Hampdens and four-motored Stirlings paid the highest toll —19 planes lost—in five months for the daring low-level attack into an intense anti-aircraft defense, particularly at Warnemuende.

At nearby Rostock, 7,000 or 8,000 persons were reported killed recently in four nights of heaviest bombing of a single town that Britain ever has done.

At the mouth of the Warne river, Warnemuende besides being the site of an important aircraft factory and a seaplane base is a station where Germany trains crews to replace those sunk with their submarines. It is also the operations center of an important ferry line to Denmark, a vital facility for Nazi reinforcement of Norway.

The attack on the airplane works there followed by only a few hours the assertion of Sir Archibald Sinclair, air minister, that the first task of the R. A. F. this summer is to pave the way for invasion by knocking out the German air force and that "by day and night, in air and on the ground where they are resting, the squadrons of the German air force in Western Europe will be exposed to unrelenting attacks of the R. A. F."

The British airmen have been concentrating this spring on German airplane factories and bases. Four of the heaviest attacks last month were directed at the Heinkel works at Rostock, from which the civilian population has been evacuated.

That Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering is aware of the crisis facing him was indicated by reports of airmen returning from Warnemuende that they met with a "fierce barrage, particularly of light anti-aircraft guns, and a great concentration of searchlights, including two made up of as many as 12 beams."

The Germans claimed to have shot down only 12 British planes, but the British admission of the loss of 19 was the largest since November 30 when the British also lost 19 bombers over northwest Germany. On November 7, 37 bombers were lost in an attack on Berlin.

Resuming the daylight phase of their offensive, British fighters today engaged in steady cross-channel sweeps from dawn to dusk, leaving a trail of explosions which could be heard on this side from the Calais area.

Germany bombed Britain but lightly, scattering a few explosives over East Anglia and causing some casualties. Four raiders were reported shot down.

The Germans identified their "reprisal" target as Norwich.

LENGTH OF WOMEN'S NIGHTGOWNS LIMITED

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP)—The government today restricted the length of women's nightgowns and ordered the frills trimmed from them and also from slips, petticoats and pajamas.

In another of its orders designed to save textiles, the war production board directed that no nightgown be manufactured longer than 54 inches for a size 36 with corresponding lengths for other sizes.

The order also prohibits ruffles, allover pleating or tucking, full sleeves, and "excessive" lengths or sweeps.

All stocks of the articles on hand as of Monday or in process of manufacture before Monday are exempt from the order.

The general restrictions provide that no nightgown, slip, petticoat or pajamas may have double material yokes; balloon, dolman or leg-of-mutton sleeves; more than one pocket; a hem wider than one inch or a ruffle bottom or a ruffle attached or applied below the waist line.

In addition no more than one article of lingerie may be sold at one price—a provision comparable to that covering sale of women's ensembles.

Further, night gowns may not be made, sold or delivered with a separate or attached jacket, robe, sacque, negligee, fichu, shawl, cape, slip, chemis, teddy bear, mittens, cape, hood, hot water bottle cover, or shoes at a unit price.

The sweep of slips and pettitcoats is limited to 60 inches for a size 36, with corresponding measurements for other sizes.

The World's Latest Market News

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP)—Stocks were buoyed by a better brand of war news in today's market and leading issues added fractions to a point or more to the recent recovery in dealings that, while still relatively slow, were the liveliest for any Saturday in two months.

Spurring considerable short covering and a little new speculative and investment demand at the start was the cheering word from General MacArthur's headquarters that the Japanese invasion armada had been repulsed in the big battle of the Coral sea.

Bidding was fairly fast in the first hour although subsequent sluggish intervals were plentiful. Transfers for the two hours approximately 200,000 shares.

Bonds generally improved. Commodities inclined to slip.

APARTMENTS NEEDED

When the influx of personnel into Monroe and West Monroe begins, incident to the building and maintenance of the Army Air Corps Base here, owners of property which can be renovated at a minimum cost will find a very keen demand for these accommodations should they be made available.

The Defense Housing Coordinator's representative, who visited Monroe recently, expressed the belief that several hundred families could and should be provided with residential facilities through the creation of small apartments through the medium of present home renovation.

The building restriction order does not stop this kind of work in defense areas. You can secure priorities for plumbing and other materials needed to provide small apartments.

Your dealer can give you complete details. Remodel now and pay in small monthly payments.

SOCIETY

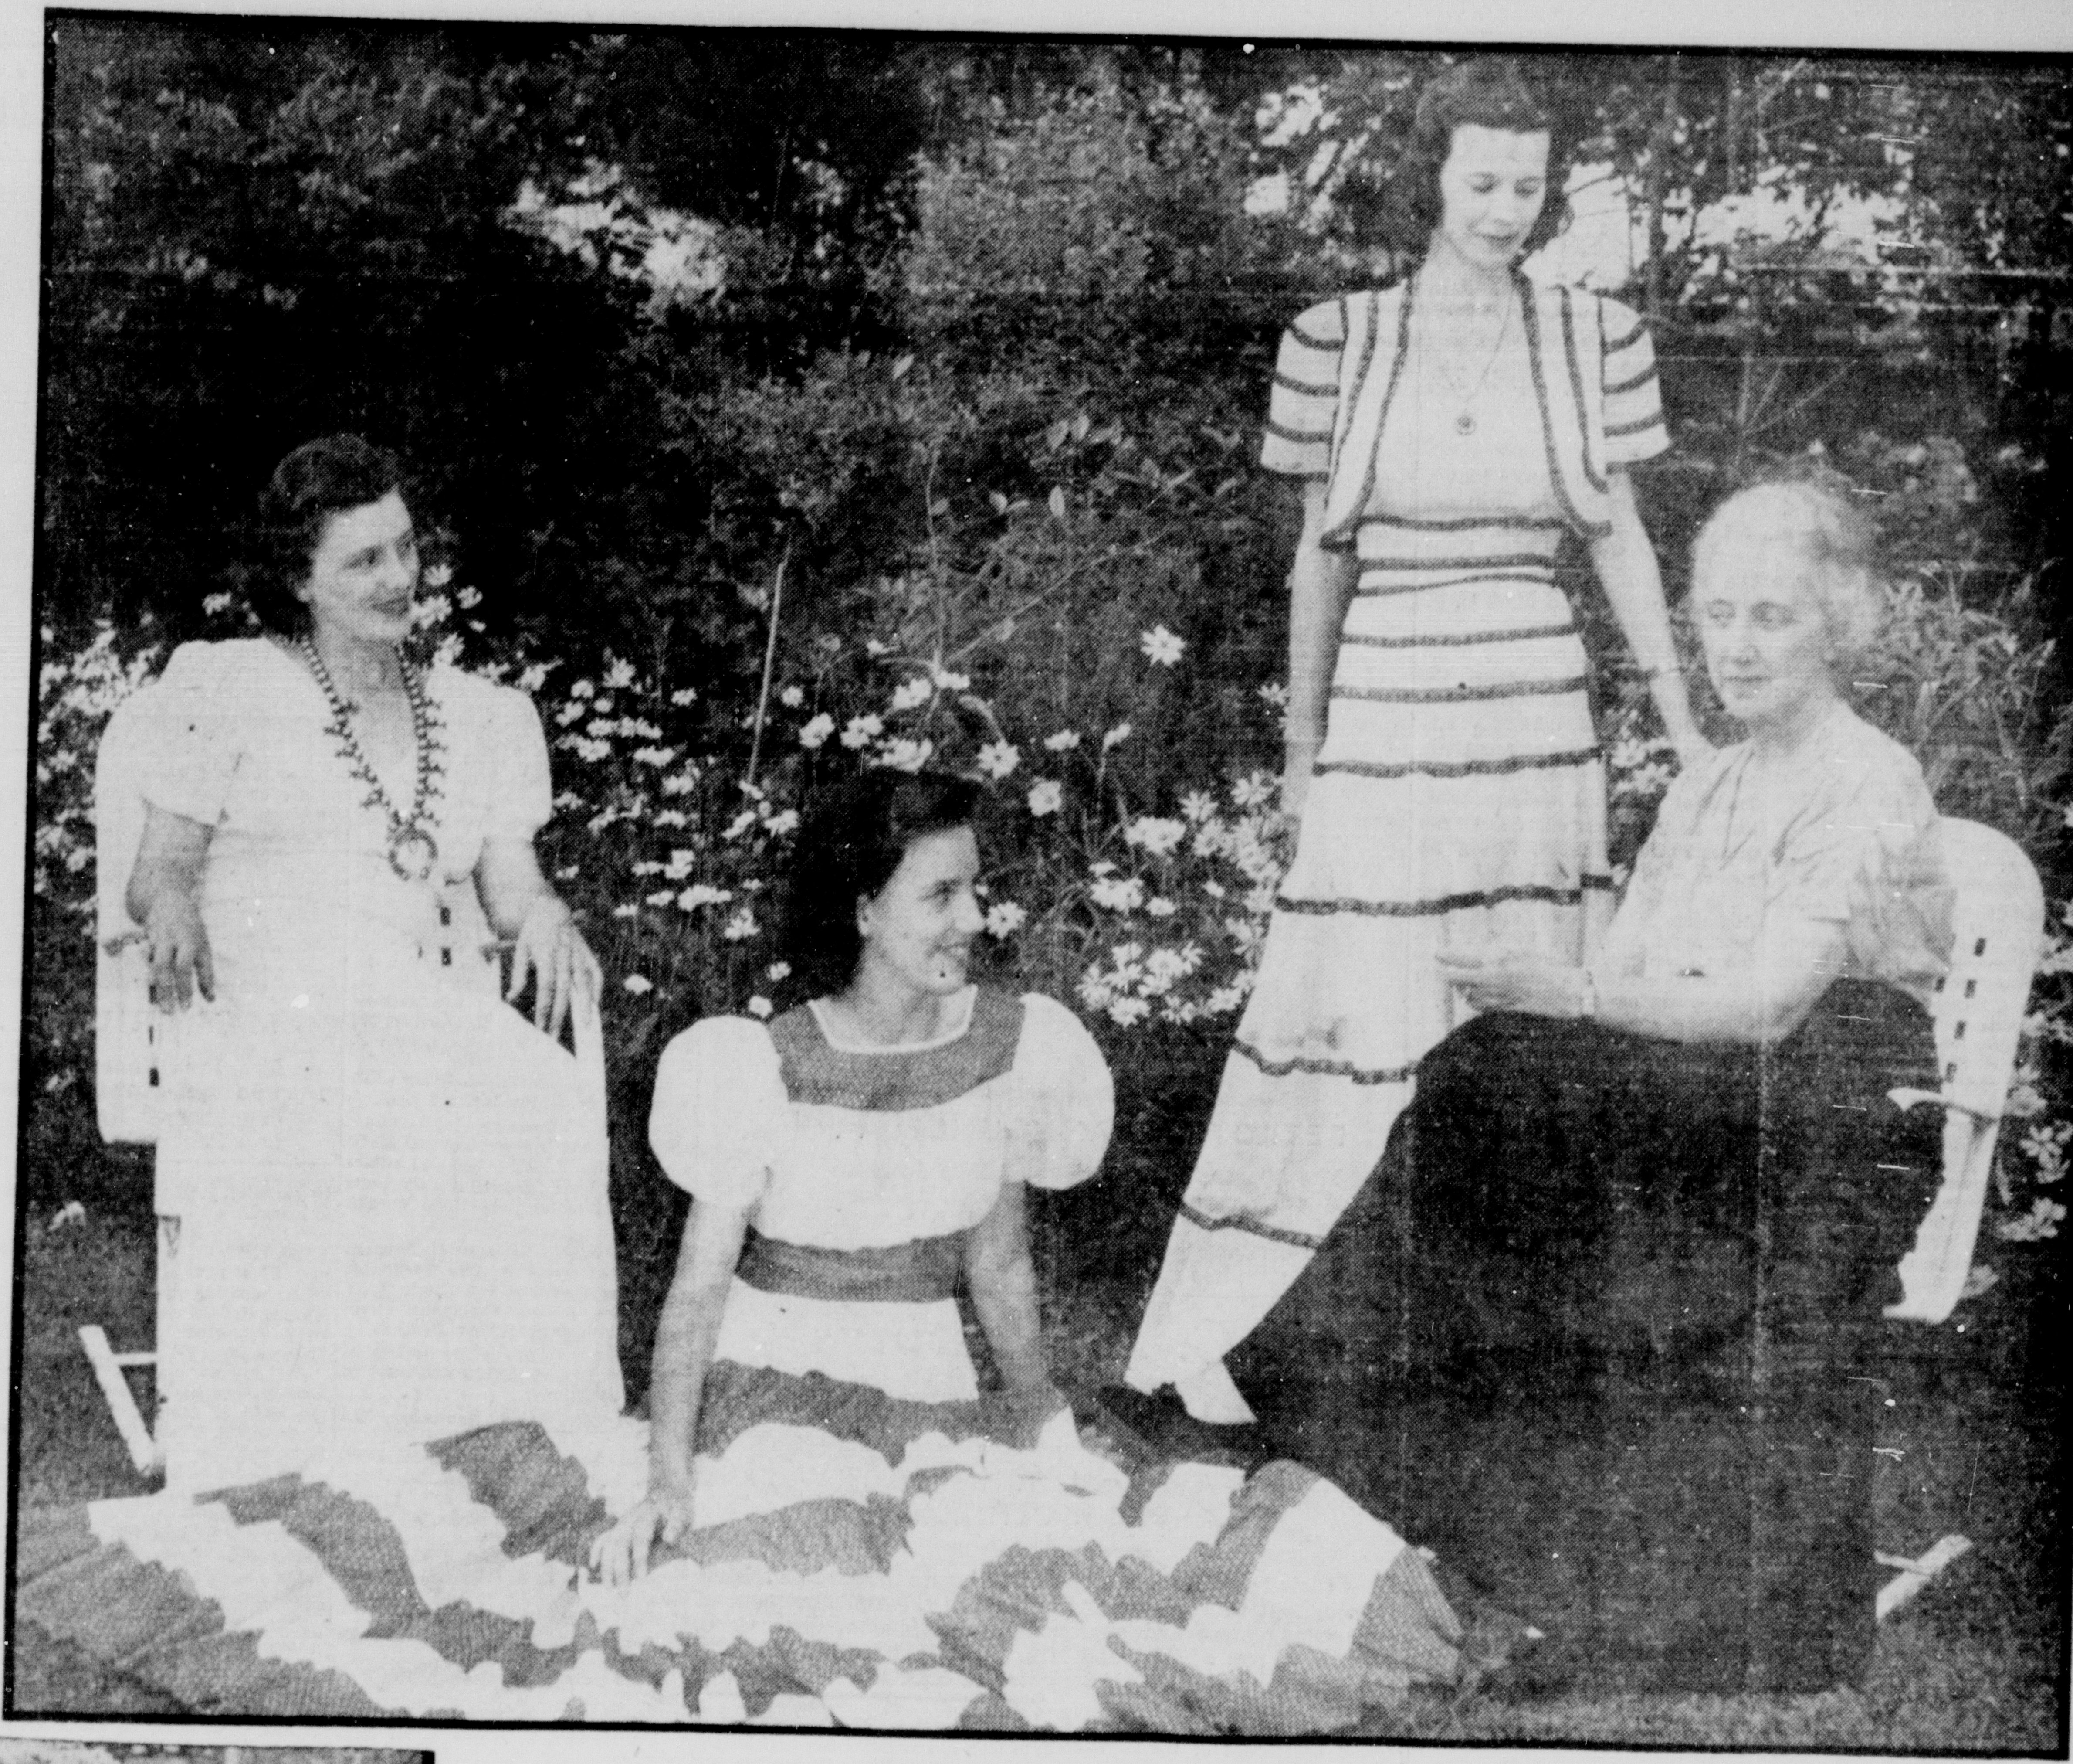
AND THE ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN

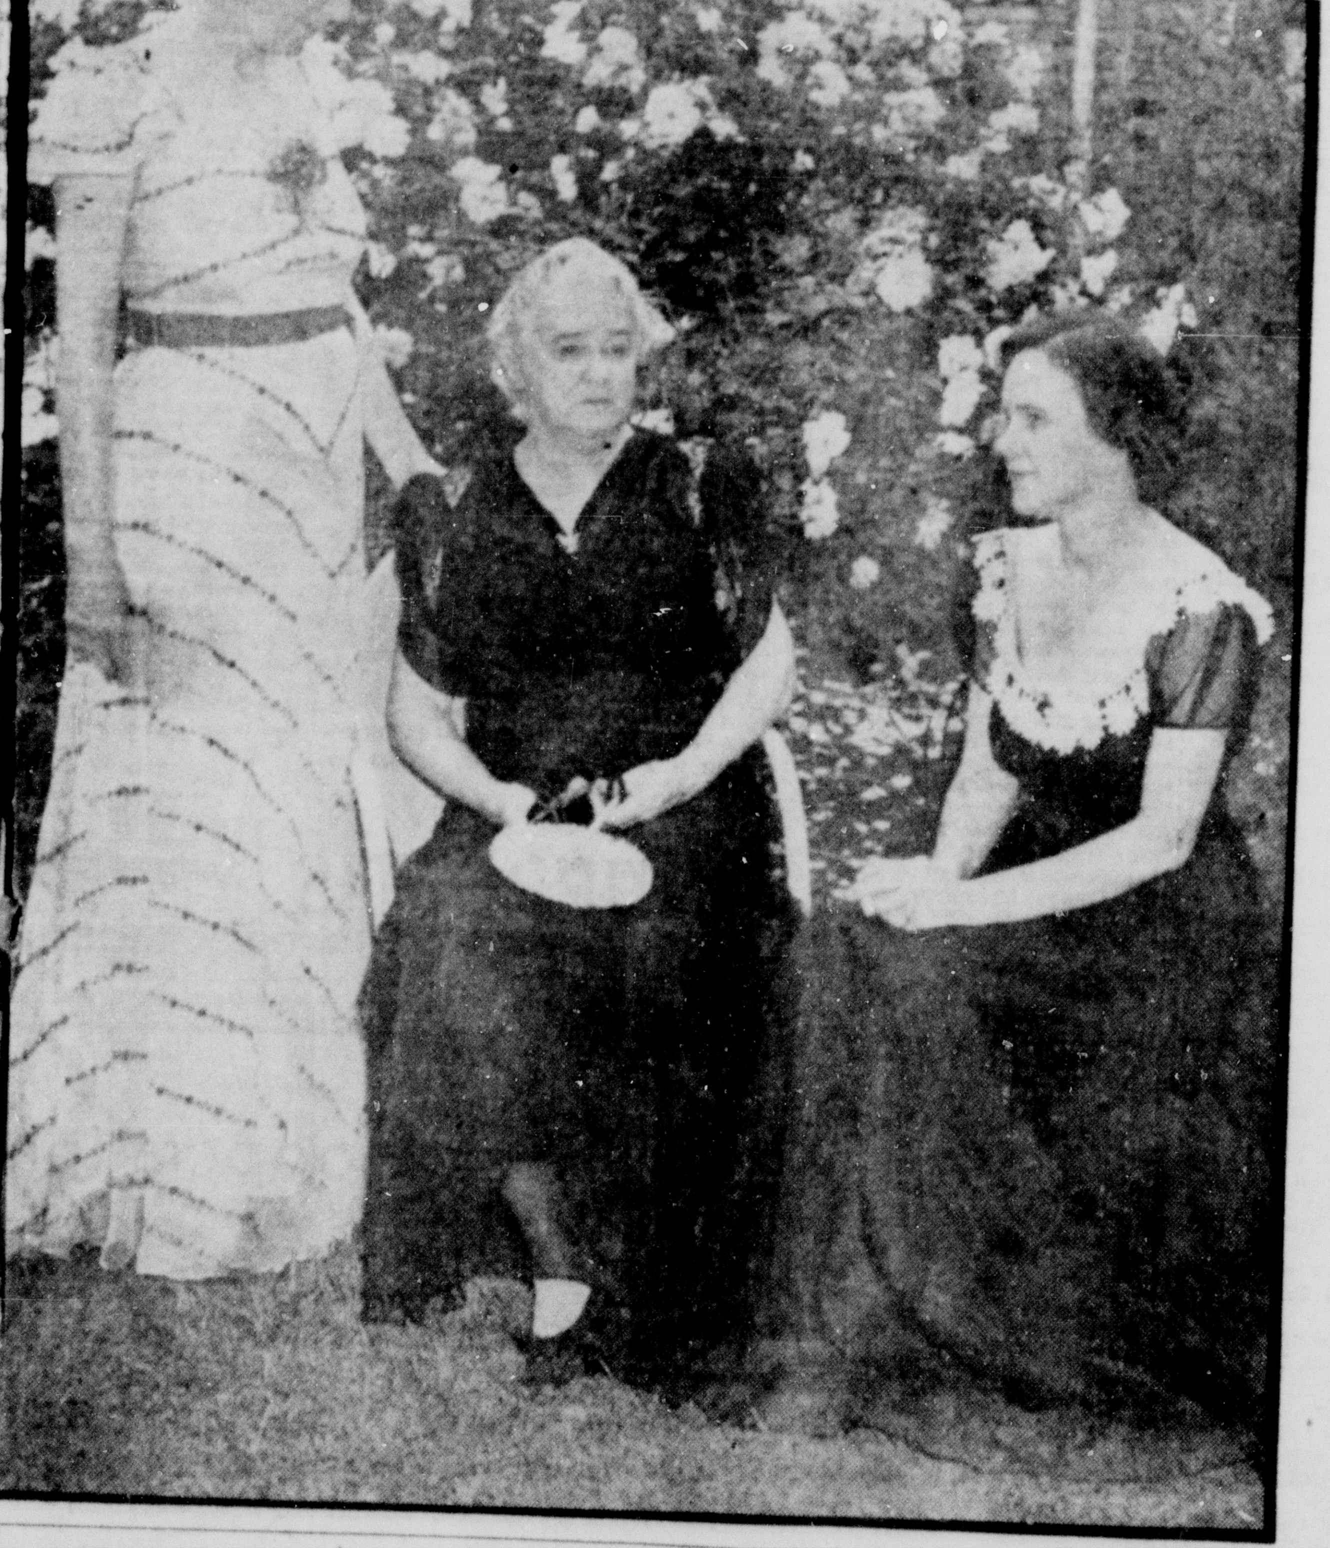
Monroe Morning World
May 10, 1942

Three charming mothers who have been associated for many years with the cultural, social and civic life of this city are seen in the pictures today with their daughters. Mrs. Theodore Terzia posed for her picture in the gardens of her home on Lover's Lane with her three daughters. To the left is Mrs. John Standley, Jr., and standing is Mrs. Douglas Miles, Jr. Miss Sara Terzia is seated.

Mrs. W. H. deGraffenreid, lower left, is seen with her daughters, Mrs. George Gunby standing and Mrs. Allen Kimball seated.

Mrs. Fred Fudickar, lower right, is seen in the gardens of her home on Riverside with her daughter, Miss Mary Louise Fudickar. Mrs. Fudickar's two sons, Ensign Fred Fudickar and Sergeant John Bennett Fudickar are with the armed forces.





To the Mothers

This Mother's day is fraught with a special poignancy and every one of the millions of mothers who have sons somewhere in the service must think with deepest sympathy and understanding of every mother so situated in this poor, distressed old world, no matter her color, her language, her dress, nor the home she is trying to keep.

A mother recently said, "I didn't raise my boy to be a soldier, but I certainly didn't raise him to be a slacker." She spoke for all mothers. You and your son, as Roosevelt said, are links in the great chain of devotion that has made America and bound it together. The country looks to you and your son and all of us to maintain that chain unbroken for generations yet unborn.

This is a trying time for mothers whose sons are in the service of their country. However all doubts and questionings have been swept away by the inexorable march of events and mothers as a whole feel that it is indeed a high honor and privilege for their son to take part in the noblest cause which they have been called upon to defend. The active work of defense must be left to the younger men but it is definitely up to the women to back them up materially and morally. This is the part all mothers will play in this war.

It is significant that Mother's Day, today, means more than a gesture of homage, and is no longer completely symbolized by the sweet, white-haired Whistler's mother. Mothers today stand for youth, freshness, gaiety, happiness and health.

The national observance of Mother's Day is being celebrated here as well as all over the country with the diverse personal expressions of sentiment traditionally used to pay particular homage to mothers on this day. Dedicatory church services, newspaper editorials, florists, gift shops, the telephone and telegraph companies will receive their due share of patronage. More conservatively, family gatherings at home will serve further to enhance the general spirit of love and loyalty engendered by the fact that the second Sunday in May is now set aside for special tribute to mothers of the world.

The scent of magnolia blossoms is luring northern soldiers who are stationed in nearby army camps, to Monroe these balmy days of early summer. You can see them walking along the residential section sniffing the perfume and pausing to admire the waxen blossoms. Many of them have never before seen such beauty and for the first time are enjoying the magnolias of song and story fame. Northerners for some reason, always associate the deep south with magnolias, moonlight, music and sleepy bayous.

Katie McGee received from Venezuela a box of orchids in perfect condition. They were sent via air mail in small glass containers by Miss McGee's sister, Mrs. T. Allen Brown, who lives with her husband in Santome. The air mail rate is almost prohibitive, otherwise Mrs. Brown could have sent dozens and dozens of these glamorous blossoms hinting of legend and mystery, as they grow wild on the sunny slopes of Venezuela. There was a perfect white orchid for Mrs. Brown's mother, Mrs. J. D. McGee, and pale mauve blossoms for the two sisters.

Miss Martha Wilton McHenry Becomes The Bride Of William Smitha Naddle

Double-Ring Ceremony Held At Jacksonville

Impressive Wedding Performed Saturday, April 25, By The Rector Of Grace Chapel

Due to the brevity and the uncertainty of military leave, a wedding originally planned for early summer in Monroe, took place in Jacksonville, Fla., on Saturday, April 25, when Miss Martha Wilton McHenry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neal McHenry of this city became the bride of William Smitha Nadler, ensign United States navy, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Nadler of New York City.

The ceremony took place near Jacksonville at Grace chapel, a small church nestling under the palms of picturesque San Jose.

Calla lilies of pronounced beauty banked the chancel and altar where tall cathedral tapers burned in white, wrought iron candelabra against a background of palms and woodwardia ferns.

The impressive double ring ceremony was performed by the rector in the presence of the immediate families and a few close friends.

The bride chose as her only attendant, her sister, Miss Marguerite McHenry, whose blonde beauty was enhanced by a lovely azure blue model of marquisette fashioned with a tight fitting basque, long, full sleeves and bouffant skirt. She wore a pink rose in her hair and carried a bouquet of Briercliff roses.

Mr. Nadler was attended by Mr. Edwin Dantin. Both were in formal naval attire.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore the traditional ivory satin wedding gown with court train. It was fashioned with tight fitting bodice, sweetheart neckline, with long sleeves puffed at the shoulders and ending in long points over the hands. She wore a small bonnet fashioned of rose point lace trimmed with orange blossoms and attached to a billowy veil of bridal illusion. She carried a white satin prayer book adorned with a white orchid.

Immediately following the ceremony the wedding party motored to Jacksonville where an informal reception was held in the bride and bridegroom's apartment on Riverside avenue.

A charming feature of the reception was the cutting of the cake with the bridegroom's saber, a ceremony which is a tradition in navy circles. The cake, adorning the lace covered table, was a three-tiered confection surmounted with a spray of full blown pink crystalized roses and valley lilies. Trays of individual wedding cakes, little frosted cakes, mints and other confections were passed among the guests.

The young couple motored to St. Augustine where they spent their honeymoon. The bride traveled in a smart, silver-grey crepe ensemble with hip length coat and a small white hat with crown made entirely of violets. She wore a corsage of purple orchids.

Ensign and Mrs. Nadler will leave shortly for Charleston, S. C., where he will be stationed temporarily.

The marriage of Miss McHenry and Ensign Nadler is the culmination of a college romance dating back to the time when they both attended Louisiana State university in Baton Rouge. Mrs. Nadler is an alumna of the Kappa Delta sorority and the Delta Gamma Delta intersorority. Numerous honors were conferred upon her while attending L. S. U. including her selection as Gumbo favorite for 1941—1942.

The bridegroom is a graduate of the Louisiana State university school of engineering. He is an alumnus of the Siga Nu social fraternity, of the Daggers interfraternity, a former member of the interfraternity council and American Society of Mechanical Engineers. He entered the United States navy in July, 1941.

MAY BRIDE . . .

Mrs. Fred Maher Miller, bride of recent date who was formerly Miss Virginia Pearman, daughter of Mrs. Vivian Pearman and the late Paul Pearman of Haynesville.

Two Novels Reviewed Before Atheneum Club

The Atheneum club met in the home of Mrs. C. C. Miller on North Seventh street, West Monroe, for the final meeting of the club year. Mesdames W. C. Feazel, J. C. Moore and Walter S. Minniear, cohostesses, graciously assisted in extending courtesies. Red, white and blue flowers portrayed a patriotic theme.

The meeting was opened by Mrs. W. C. Curry, president, and the pledge of allegiance to the flag was repeated in unison led by Mrs. A. J. Lester.

Mrs. C. C. Miller, program chairman, announced the program.

Concluding a series of "Adventures in Reading" outlined by the University of North Carolina Library Extension publication, two novels were chosen.

"Fame is the Spur" by Howard Spring, a long, complex, many charactered and much incidented novel was reviewed by Mrs. W. C. Curry in a very interesting manner. It is a full-scale study of a great man's rise and fall in the quest for glory. It is the story of a man who sought fame, Hamer Shawcross, who was brought up in the slums of Manchester by a poor Wesleyan parson—also the story of his two friends, Tom Hannaway, for whom money was the spur and Arnold Ryerson, for whom the dream of social justice was the spur. For good measure the novel contains two moving love stories, a vivid account of the fight of the suffragettes, and a history of the rise of the British labor party through which Hamer rose to power.

"Up at the Villa" by W. Somerset Maugham was capably reviewed by Mrs. George Mercer. This story is closely knit, splendidly built with its dramatic peaks precisely where they ought to be. A dash of mystery thrill and a sprinkling of harmless psychology is present. It is a short novel essentially well mannered with a suicide in it that doesn't smell of blood and with a few well described characters who are all fairly nice people even if they do a number of rather ghastly things.

At the conclusion of these two splendid reviews thoroughly enjoyed by all, Mrs. W. C. Curry introduced Mrs. E. P. Cudd, who very graciously installed the incoming officers for the year 1942-43—Mrs. A. J. Lester, president; Mrs. S. D. Kennedy, vice-president; Mrs. Fred M. Grant, treasurer; Mrs. John Lewis, secretary; Mrs. A. L. Dickerson, program chairman and assistants Mrs. George Mercer and Mrs. Harry Schroeder; reporter, Mrs. W. C. Curry; parliamentarian, Mrs. C. C. Miller; historian, Mrs. Dale Cobb. The installation ceremony was followed by the club members repe ing the club collect in unison.

After adjournment the hostesses vited those present to the dining ro From the lace-covered table with c terpiece of red roses, white snapdr ons and blue iris, carrying out patriotic theme, strawberry punch served from the punch bowl by M J. C. Moore. Rolled toasted sandwic and cakes decorated in patriotic tif were served by the hostesses.

Members present were Mesda Fred Grant, W. C. Curry, S. D. K nedy, George Mercer, A. L. Dicker Agnes Dickerson, T. Gallien, D. Nicol, John P. Lewis, A. J. Lester two guests, Mrs. E. P. Cudd and Fred Sanders and the hostesses.

Welcome Branch Club Hears Nutrition Talk

Miss Frances Kelso Points Out Value Of Well-Fed Nation And Mrs. J. R. White Speaks

The Welcome Branch Book club met Wednesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Charles Swain. Mrs. Albert Speer and Mrs. F. E. Black served as co-hostesses.

Mrs. J. T. Eubank, presiden., presided over the meeting. Reports from different committee chairmen and officers were given at this time. Mrs. F. E. Black, chairman of national defense department, urged members to continue buying bonds and stamps during the summer months so as to help our country in this time of great need.

Plans were completed for the club picnic to be held May 20 at 6 p.m. in the gardens of Mrs. C. C. Colvert's home.

Mrs. J. R. White gave a most interesting account of the national convention of General Federation of Women's clubs, held in Fort Worth, Tex., which she attended.

Mrs. Zell Smith, program chairman, introduced Mrs. A. E. Kilpatrick, chairman of nutrition under the department of national defense. She in turn introduced Miss Frances Kelso, Northeast Junior College home economics teacher. Miss Kelso gave an instructive talk on nutrition. She pointed out the value and need of a well-fed nation, how good eating habits should be developed in early childhood. America is a country rich in food but is not a well-fed country; forty-five million people are on a diet below the safety line. Milk and fruits can be added to a poor diet and make it a good diet. The importance of a well balanced school lunch was stressed. Miss Kelso made many suggestions in the preparing and buying of foods, which were most beneficial.

Typewritten copies of forty household hints collected and prepared by Mrs. J. A. Winkler, Jr., were distributed among the members.

Mrs. Dean Selig played beautifully her own piano composition, "Flowers of Spring Time." Mrs. George Phebus, in a delightful manner reviewed "They Went on Together," by Robert Nathan.

The substance of "They Went on Together" is of the simplest. The enemy planes invade a country that sometimes seem to be France and sometimes seems to be the United States, and the small and very American boy, Paul, his tinier sister, Marie Rose, and their mother are compelled to flee before the bombers, pushing their few provisions before them in a perambulator. A sturdy girl named Sylvie finds the party, and the two other children suffer the same experiences which children in Europe, Asia and Africa have endured. The emotional responses of the children are the emotional responses of any American boy and girl, and in their inarticulateness, Mr. Nathan finds opportunity for that mingling of sentiment and pathos which has replaced satire in his fiction.

Refreshments were served to Mrs. F. E. Black, Mrs. Sam Campbell, Mrs. Henson Coon, Mrs. J. T. Eubank, Mrs. V. S. Garnett, Mrs. E. C. Gibson, Mrs. Ralph Gibson, Mrs. A. S. Gunter, Mrs. J. G. Hicks, Mrs. A. E. Kilpatrick, Mrs. Jack Masur, Mrs. Charles Morris, Mrs. J. D. Petty, Mrs. George Phebus, Mrs. J. S. Pickard, Mrs. W. E. Sandel, Mrs. Dean Selig, Mrs. Zell Smith, Mrs. Albert Speer, Mrs. Charles Swain, Mrs. J. R. White, Mrs. Paul T. Wright, Mrs. Kurt Thies, Mrs. F. W. Dawson, Mrs. R. I. Senn, Mrs. G. B. Riggen. Guests were Mrs. Know and Mrs. D. B. McOstrick.

Review Club Holds Interesting Program

Mrs. DeWitt Henry graciously received members of the Review club in her home for the regular meeting last week.

Two brilliant novels closed the club's program for the year. Subject, "Masters of the Art," was announced by Mrs. A. T. Givens.

Mrs. C. A. Nenney interestingly reviewed, "Fame Is the Spur," by Howard Spring; a long complex novel of many characters and incidents. In essence it is the story of Dick Whittington, the poor boy's rise to fame and power, told with ironic overtones and implications, and with a very rich background.

"Up at the Villa," by Somerset Maugham was given by Mrs. C. B. Braun. In this very short novel, we find Mr. Maugham returning from his recent excursion into political writings and the old maestro is himself again. The story of pretty Mary Panton and her three lovers, is interesting and well written, but the plot is shocking, rather incredible and disappointing.

At this meeting, the club completed plans for an open program to be held at Northeast Junior college on May 18th at 3:30 p. m. The literary clubs of the city will be invited guests to hear Dr. L. M. Norton, registrar and teacher of government and history at the college, speak on "The Life and Works of Maurice Hindus."

Members present at the meeting: Mesdames C. A. Nenney, D. M. Moore, E. P. Cudd, A. T. Givens, W. T. Davis, Walter Rhodes, B. J. Breard, C. V. McGimsey, B. V. Wright, Henry Colbert, C. B. Braun and the hostess.

Welcome Garden Club Enters Upon Their New Year With Renewed Enthusiasm

Message Of President Delivered At Meeting

Mrs. Jack Bagwell Urges Members To Make Scrap Book, Keep Account Of Vegetables Grown

With renewed enthusiasm, members of Welcome Garden club entered upon their new year, last week, when they met in the Mirror room of the Frances hotel. The new president, Mrs. Jack Bagwell, thanked Mrs. Ralph Gibson program chairman and her able committee for the splendid yearbook they had prepared. She urged each member to make at least one scrapbook, and suggested that they keep an account of the value of vegetables grown in their victory gardens for the final report at the end of the year.

The following committees were appointed; horticulture, Mrs. Charles Swain, conservation, Mrs. John Harper, streets and parks, Mrs. Charles Swain, Mrs. A. S. Tidwell and Mrs. T. C. Johnson, flower arrangement Mrs. John Best, Mrs. Carey Holmes, and Mrs. Henson Coon, defense, Mrs. R. O. Randle, Mrs. W. L. Mitchell, and Mrs. J. P. Royce, scrapbook, Mrs. Curtis Freeman. Mrs. Bagwell stated on account of tire shortage the club would not maintain a visiting committee, but would send cards in case of illness.

A splendid program was then presented. Mrs. V. S. Garnett gave an interesting talk and demonstration on making corsages at home. She told of how our grandmothers carried pomanders around at parties. "They were made by sticking cloves solidly into a firm apple, and were very fragrant.

"In making a corsage points to keep in mind are: type of person to wear it, whether it is to be worn on suit or evening dress, and whether it is to be worn in hair, on purse, wrist or shoulder. If on the shoulder, it should be suited to the style of the neckline. Flowers to be used should stand in water at least one hour to which Floralife has been added. Exception for gladiolus. Materials needed are: fine wire or spool of thread, scissors, parafilm or tinfoil, wet cotton, ribbon and choice flowers. There are two types of corsages. The multiple blossom type with flowers compact and stems one-half inch long, and the cluster type with flowers varying in height and stems four inches long below where they are tied."

Mrs. Garnett demonstrated making a corsage of red sweetpeas and one of cream and yellow columbine. She said, "Strip leaves from stems, work with flowers to make them lie flat, fill all open spaces with flowers, wrap stems with thread or wire near blossoms, cut stems short, apply wet cotton, and cover with parafilm or tinfoil which must not show in the finished product. Do not use too much ribbon. Instead let the flowers do the work. Some of the prettiest corsages have no ribbon. They may be kept for several days by placing in the refrigerator (not in water). In making pillow corsages for one who is ill use dainty flowers and avoid those having strong odors."

Mrs. Harry Shroeder discussed in an interesting manner "Something New in the Garden." She said, "Many are growing vegetables for the first time and those who have little room are mixing them with their flowers. Beds being bordered with lettuce, mustard, or strawberry plants. With smaller space an interesting arrangement is to use a discarded barrel. Place bricks in the bottom for drainage, fill with leaf mold, and plant with cucumbers or tomatoes. These must be watered daily. For those who have no ground they may have window boxes and porch gardens to grow such seasonings as mint, red pepper, chive, etc. Some who have large places are planting bamboo for fences, privacy, fishing poles and stakes.

"Make notes on the color scheme in your yard now so you may know what to plant and where, in your garden next year. Just now it is interesting to have red, white and blue flowers blooming in your yard."

Mrs. Charles Swain, horticulture chairman, gave interesting suggestions on what to do in the garden now, and conducted an open forum with many members participating. She said, "Plant gladiolus every month of the year, disinfect corms and plant in a new place, working a handful of bone meal under each one. In heavy soil they should be planted 3 to 4 inches deep and in sandy soil 5 inches. In cutting blossoms spare at least 4 leaves on old stalk to store food in the corms.

"Feed azalias and iris bone meal after they are through blooming. Kill the white grubs you find when spading as they are the larvae of the June beetle which is especially destructive to strawberry plants. For cut worms use wood ashes around plants then water. This makes lye which kills them."

Mrs. H. V. Collins extended thanks to the club for the beautiful flowers furnished for the Library convention recently held in Monroe.

Lovely corsages were made by members and brought to the meeting. One made of native iris by Mrs. Curtis Freeman won first place, Sweetheart roses by Mrs. J. C. Anders second place, and snapdragons by Mrs. A S. Gunter, third place. Mrs. M. C. McDonald's specimen amaryllis was outstanding. Members are urged to bring pot plants, corsages, large, medium, and small (under 6 inches) arrangements, and specimens to each meeting. They will be graded as follows: First place 100; second 75, and third 50 points. Corsages and large, medium, and small arrangements are given first, second and third places. There is no competition in specimens. Each outstanding specimen getting 50 points. Ten points are given for each entry. Throughout last year Mrs. W. D. Clark received a high of 1,000 points and was awarded a lovely ivory flower bowl lined with turquoise.

The retiring president, Mrs. H. V. Collins, was presented with a beautiful flower bowl.

Members present were:

Mesdames J. C. Anders, Jack Bagwell, R. E. Bedwell, F. E. Black, H. V. Collins, Henson Coon, A. K. Crow, J. Leon Dennis, V. S. Garnett, Ralph Gibson, A. S. Gunter, John Harper, C. T. Literature Club Hears Lecture By Dr. Norton

Junior College Professor Tells How Japan's Wars Of Aggression Follow Pattern Since Restoration

"The Menace of Japan," a topic of vital importance, was the subject of an interesting address given by Dr. L. M. Norton before members of the Current Literature club, on Wednesday afternoon, in the home of Mrs. W. O. Webb.

Dr. Norton, a sincere and brilliant speaker, sketched the history of Japan since the Restoration of 1868, and demonstrated how Japan's wars of aggression since that date have systematically followed a pattern first advanced by Lord Hatta and later reiterated by Baron Tanka. He vividly described the characteristic cruelty which has accompanied these conquests and which is a fundamental element of the Japanese mentality. "They have won," says Dr. Norton, "the admiration of the world by their marvelous adaptability. The Japanese have not so progressed in their social thinking. The real menace of Japan lies in the fact that medieval minds have been equipped with scientific implements of destruction."

Mrs. Jordan Barton closed the afternoon's program with a short review of the book "Mr. and Mrs. Cugat" by Roderic. She said in part: "If you are weary with the war and its worries, tired of historical novels and want a book that will take your mind off all present day cares for a few hours then 'Mr. and Mrs. Cugat' is your best bet. The writer has a very clever way of introducing Mr. and Mrs. Cugat, whom she describes as a happily married couple. Mr. Cugat is the vice-president of a bank in a small New York town and both he and his wife are among the leaders of society in this community.

"Myra, an old sweetheart of Mr. Cugat, decides to come for a visit, much to the disgust of Mrs. Cugat of course. From there on the writer relates in a very humorous and delightful manner the many incidents in the life of this happily married couple which go to make this one of the best current humorous novels.

"You will chuckle with Mr. Cugat and sympathize with Mrs. Cugat, along with their other many friends, on several occasions. All in all it is a book that can well be recommended for an interesting afternoon's reading."

A LETTER TO MY MOTHER

. . . you were always a little embarrassed by Mother's Day, I remember. "Such a fuss!" you used to say, hiding your face for a moment in the roses we brought you.

Yet you never threw the roses away until the petals fell in a scarlet shower on the piano top. And you saved all the silly little cards we sent you.

No card could ever explain how all the sights and sounds and feelings of our lives are woven into our memories of you . . . the smell of a lilac bush wet with rain and the fragrance of warm nut cookies—that, somehow, is you . . . the edged crease in a white tablecloth, wind-billowed curtains, the shaded quiet of a sick room, too, are you.

I remember your brisk nod when you liked my report cards; how you frowned when I tracked mud across the kitchen; the smudges of flour in the edge of your hair and the way your hands lay tiredly on your lap sometimes . . . I tell you all these things so you will know how really remembered you are, this Mother's Day particularly, when you symbolize all that is peaceful and unchanging in this fretful world.

A Letter From My Mother

You may write a thousand letters
To the girl that you adore
And declare in every letter
That you love her more and more

You may praise her grace and beauty
In a thousand glooming lines
And compare her eyes of azure
With the brightest stars that shine

But a much more welcome letter
To an older, gentler breast
Is a letter to your mother
From her boy she loves the best.

If you had the pen of Byron
You would use it every day
In composing written worship
To your sweetheart far away.

But a much more precious letter
With more and deeper bliss
Is a letter to your mother
From the boy she cannot kiss.

She will read it very often
When the lights are soft and low
Sitting in the same old corner
Where she held you years ago.

And regardless of it's diction
Or it's spelling or its style
Although its composition
Would provoke a critic's smile.

In her old and trembling fingers
It becomes a work of art.
Stained by tears of joy and sadness
As she hugs it to heart.

The letter of all letters
Look wherever you may roam
Is the letter to your mother
From her boy away from home.

Announcement this morning by Sergeant Harold McNemar, commander of the local army recruiting service in the Monroe postoffice building, gave Monroe and this vicinity an additional quota for enlistment of young qualified men directly into the American "Paratroops."

All young men between the ages of 18 and 30 who are in sound physical condition may be examined for this branch of the service. In making this announcement Sergeant McNemar said: "The time is rapidly drawing near when the American soldier will be carrying the war into the enemies' home ground. These highly qualified young men now being trained for the parachute troops will be the 'American Commandos' and they will have a complete knowledge of all infantry army from the pistol to the light mortar. They will, as a result of this training, be the most self-reliant soldier the world has ever known, and no situation will find them at a loss. The absence of a superior officer will not find them waiting to be told what to do and when to do it, or how to do it, they will themselves be in full command of the situation. Often they will work far behind the lines of the enemies' territory, disrupting his communications and lines of supply. He will be ready to fight at the drop of a hat, and he won't be too particular who knocks off the hat."

With the army pay bill increase a certain fact, the pay of a private in the parachute troops will be increased to $92 per month after he completes his basic training and has qualified as a "Paratrooper" by making a series of jumps from varying heights, and when he receives his vaunted insignia of blue and white, he knows that he is the world's best-trained soldier, and he is indeed proud of the fact.

Due to the limited time that these vacancies will be open, McNemar strongly urges all husky young men in thi ssector to contact him at once in regards to filling one of these highly technical vacancies in the parachute units.

Established 10 Years Ago, Firm Knows How To Do Job

"Ouachita motorists are becoming tire-conscious," says O. C. Luther, of the Luther Wheel Alignment Service. Mr. Luther, who has had 10 years' experience in his chosen field of endeavor, is today enjoying the greatest volume of business his shop has had in the decade of operation.

Mr. Luther points out that in the past tires were not only plentiful but cheap, and car owners gave but little thought to whether or not their wheels were in perfect alignment or balance. Despite the fact that an automobile frame out of alignment may cause 50 per cent or more of the wear on the tires, the owner usually just let his tires wear out and then replaced them with little thought as to the whys and wherefores of their wear.

Today it's a different story. With no more new tires available the car owner is giving his rubber his personal attention and he is realizing just where his rubber went in years past.

In Mr. Luther's shop, located at 204 North Second in the building occupied by the Central Service Station No. 2, Mr. Luther has the Bear equipment, recognized as the last word in efficient equipment. According to Mr. Luther, wheels, even slightly out of balance, will cause excessive tire wear. Unbalanced wheels also cause "shimmy," discomfort in driving and wear on the steering gear of the car.

Also, as a part of the equipment, the Luther Wheel Alignment Service has the Bear instruments for checking and aligning the wheels and frame. Mr. Luther points out that the slightest out of alignment results in excessive tire wear and shorter life to the tire. A car brought to his shop is thoroughly checked by instruments then aligned perfectly. "There is no guessing about it," said Mr. Luther. "When we complete the job the owner can be assured his frame and wheels are aligned perfectly and that many miles will be added to the life of his tires."

Cost for his services, according to Mr. Luther, are negligible compared with the saving in tires.

With 10 years' experience behind him, Mr. Luther assures his customers that if they will bring their cars in for a checkup he will check them and make an estimate on the costs.

Mr. Luther urges motorists to aid in rubber conservation and at the same time practice real economy by consulting him.

● SERIAL STORY

FRANTIC WEEKEND

BY EDMUND FANCOTT

COPYRIGHT, 1942, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CHAPTER XXIII

Baldy stirred in his sleep, brushed the handkerchief from his mouth, and sat up with all the alacrity of an anemic hippopotamus. The sun was warm, his nap had been pleasant, and he felt lazily prepared to cope with any and all conspiracies against him. As for Peggy, now—

He looked around for her. No Peggy. No canoe. No one, a shambling search revealed, on the island. The lake was annoyingly calm under a noon sun, with no sign of life on any of its shores, no one on the wharf.

Baldy looked at his watch. Hmm. Past lunchtime. He was hungry. He was getting angry. A cigaret accompanied his watch of the wharf.

Not pleasant to Baldy the crafty, Baldy the shrewd, was the teasing thought that Peggy had double-crossed him. All the while she had been pretending to work with him. And all the while she had been plotting with that bunch of deadheads. The little so-and-so! I'll give her a chance, he thought viciously. I'll give her a chance to break her nasty little neck, and that's all.

Fay . . . ah! he thought sorrowfully. She'd never have done this to him. No, it was the others. After all he had done for Fay, she'd never have the nerve to do this to him. But by the saints, he'd get even with those others if he had to take that little so-and-so to New York and break her spirit!

As time wore on and he got hungrier, his thoughts became progressively blacker. Eventually they reached the murderous stage as he paced hungrily around the confined island. He was hotter and hotter as the afternoon grew heavy with humidity and little trickles of perspiration glistened on his bald head. He began to speak his thoughts aloud. Fortunately, only the trees were within range of his mutterings.

At last he saw a lone figure on the wharf and then a canoe wobbling dangerously as someone paddled toward the island.

Baldly stopped his muttering and stared. It was the sister! He groaned as he thought of Myra's skill with a canoe and shuddered at the thought of the waterfall they had nearly died on.

As the canoe came nearer, Myra steered it with dangerous incompetence toward the island.

"I've brought you some sandwiches and a bottle of beer," she said cheerfully, without any attempt at explanation. Baldy forgot about explanations. The sight of food and drink was like a beacon to a shipwrecked sailor. He caught the edge of the canoe and stepped in.

"Hey!" yelled Myra, "don't do that!"

She was too late. She was in the water, so was Baldy, so was the food and the beer, the beer at the bottom of the lake and the sandwiches disintegrating slowly. Baldy groaned and floundered ashore with Myra who dragged the canoe with her and emptied the water with difficulty.

Baldy sat down and held his head in his hands, his sports suit dripping around him shapelessly.

"Now," said Myra, "step in carefully this time."

"No," said Baldy. "Not if I have to live here the rest of my life! I ain't going to risk going over those falls again . . . or drowning in the middle of this lake. I can't swim."

"Too bad," said Myra. "What are you going to do?"

"You try and get back and send someone who can work one of those things."

"All right." Myra spoke quite cheerfully, but with a lurking smile in her eyes. "It might take some time."

An hour later the bedraggled Baldy climbed up the path to the house with Ferdy. They passed the rockery and Baldy's neck went red with a sudden desire to commit murder when he caught a view of Peggy suddenly releasing herself from the arms of Nigel.

She ran to meet him. "Oh, Baldy," she cried. "Did they only just get you? They said they'd go right after lunch."

Baldy eyed her with a glittering hatred. "You little . . ." Then he paused as he saw Nigel's fist close significantly.

Peggy's eyes warned him to keep quiet.

"I've fixed everything," she said. "Not a word."

She pushed Nigel back and walked with a suspicious Baldy.

"I've got a new idea. I've fixed everything," said Peggy confidently. "Maybe you weren't born in a large family like I was. If you were you'd know that when they get tough the only thing to do is to string along with them for awhile and then get your own way later. It is the easiest way in the end."

"So what?" grumbled Baldy rudely.

"You go and change and I'll be waiting for you with a Collins," she said.

"Make it three, and six sandwiches," he growled.

A little later Baldy emerged in a suit and loose jacket in a pale rose shade, beautifully pressed, with a shirt of deeper hue, almost maroon, as a final improbable touch.

Baldy took a deep draught at one of the four glasses in front of him and bit deep into a sandwich. His eyes did not meet those of Peggy, who sat deep in a chair swinging one leg over the arm.

"It's this way," said Peggy. "You've got to handle families gently. So I thought if I became engaged to Nigel . . ."

"That mutt?" muttered Baldy, his mouth full. He felt he was beyond caring.

"He is not a mutt! He's terribly strong too," said Peggy. "But that isn't the point. If I became engaged to Nigel the family would think I was settled and then when he went overseas I could come down to New York . . ."

Baldly took a long drink and tackled another sandwich.

"Then I thought," continued Peggy, "that if Mike proposed to Fay and they were engaged she would be in the family and I could persuade her when he went overseas to come with me back to New York."

Baldy sneered at the thought of a topliner like Fay Ransom mixing it with a mere lieutenant.

"So I suggested to Mike that he should drive her into Montreal by himself and at least try . . ."

Baldy sat up as if shot.

"She's gone? Where's she gone?"

Peggy soothed him by pushing the third drink invitingly nearer. "They drove away about an hour ago, just the two of them . . ." She paused while a hint of apoplectic crimson darkened Baldy's neck and then spread over his domelike head. He gulped the third drink and grabbed the fourth.

"But I've got the best idea of the lot to bring it all in the family. Daddy couldn't very well object to me being managed by a son-in-law . . ." Baldy got up and looking at Peggy queerly, he backed away. Peggy rose from her chair and followed him.

"So I thought if you proposed to Myra . . ." She stopped suddenly. Baldy had turned and was disappearing rapidly. Myra came into the room.

"What's the rush?" she asked.

"I've found a husband for you," said Peggy with an eager smile. "Isn't it wonderful, at last!"

Myra's lips tightened to an unamused line. She glared at her young sister, green eyes bright and cheeks flushed with excitement.

"Hear that car?" said Myra. "That's Baldy getting out as quick as he can. Get your things packed. We're going before you try to marry Ferdy off to his aunt!"

Peggy was unperturbed. "Isn't it wonderful?" she murmured. "We'll be driving back in Nigel's car."

'Return Of Dan Boone' Now At Joy

Bill Elliott, Popular Cowboy Ace, Provides Thrills In Western

SPEEDING along on his headlong gallop to stardom, Bill Elliott, popular Columbia action ace, rides into the Joy theater today in his latest outdoor adventure yarn, "The Return of Daniel Boone." Departing from his usual role of Wild Bill Hickok, the husky young star portrays a grandson of the famous American scout of earlier American history, Daniel Boone.

With Walter "Dub" Taylor again appearing as Cannonball, Elliott's amusing sidekick, the new film has been widely hailed for its hair-raising action, breath-taking drama and gun-blazing thrills! Betty Miles, flaming-haired California beauty, and well-known horsewoman, is said to contribute more than her share of thrills in the role of leading lady, while other featured players include Ray Bennett, Walter Sodering, Carl Stockdale, Bud Osborne and the talented Rodik Twins.

The exciting drama opens in Pecos, a small town on the route to Tucson where Leach Kilgrain, an unscrupulous hotel owner, has been forcing the mayor to raise taxes on all the neighboring ranches. Unable to pay the increased assessments, the ranchers are forced to forfeit their property and Kilgrain buys the land cheaply at foreclosure auctions.

Determined to resist the crooked racket, Ellen Brand brandishes her pistol when the tax collector visits her father's ranch and in the altercation that follows, shoots the man. Not long after, young Dan Boone rides into town and accepts the vacant job of tax collector. He soon realizes how crooked Kilgrain really is and sets his assistant, Cannonball, to trailing him.

How he succeeds in capturing the crook and proving to the entire town that their own mayor has been in cahoots with the villain, furnishes the basis for a smashing climax to a rousing drama!

Sabu Stars In Thrilling New Picture

Spectacular Film Produced By Alexander Korda At Staggering Cost

AFTER months of painstaking preparation and research, Alexander Korda has transferred to the screen the thrilling adventure classic, Rudyard Kipling's "Jungle Book," which was filmed in magnificent Technicolor and stars Sabu in the role of Mowgli, a creature that is half-boy and half-wolf. Kipling's "Jungle Book" was directed by Zoltan Korda and is slated for its local premiere at the Paramount theater today through United Artists release.

Korda budgeted his massive Technicolor picturization of the famous masterpiece at more than a million dollars. Props alone for Kipling's "Jungle Book" cost $60,000, while items used to embellish the film account of the exploits of the young boy who was raised by jungle wild animals and returned to his native village after twelve years to learn again the ways of man, were valued at $150,000.

The background of Kipling's "Jungle Book" is picturesque Northern India during the last century and entailed scenes of authentic jungle beauty, filled with wild animals and tropic bird life, as well as scenes of fantastic splendor completely out of this world. Consequently there were no props available in the vast storehouses of movieland and nearly all had to be manufactured to conform with the designs created by Art Director Vincent Korda. Among the most unusual props that were manufactured were a heavily jewelled howdah for Sabu to ride into the lost city and twelve jewelled scepters with delicate filagree designs.

The most spectacular set created for Kipling's "Jungle Book" was an East Indian dream city—a color-splashed setting of minarets, domes and parapets, flat-topped houses and mysterious stairways. A white temple, gleaming like a vast jewel dominates the scene, with the dense jungle stretching far beyond.

Ten acres in California's famed Sherwood forest were devoted to the Indian jungle and its mile-long river, where were found practically every wild animal that ever lived, including tigers, leopards, black panthers, wolves, bears, jackals, elephants and a countless variety of birds.

The jungle village is a walled city with a great log gate, eighteen feet in height and twenty feet wide. The town has squat little homes, furnished in East Indian decor, a blacksmith shop and a little temple with white tower and tinted walls.

Feudists Of Marines In New Picture

'Call Out The Marines' Stars Victor McLaglen And Edmund Lowe

VICTOR McLaglen and Edmund Lowe are back in the marine corps!

The quarrelling, romancing devil-dogs whose exploits won them undying fame in "What Price Glory" and "The Cockeyed World," are teamed again in an exciting modern comedy-drama of the service, "Call Out the Marines," which opens today at the Capitol theater.

The story presents the pair as old buddies who accidentally meet in civilian life after a long separation, and who go to the races to celebrate. There they meet the attractive Vi, an entertainer at a waterfront cafe patronized by service men and, unknown to them, a member of a foreign spy ring.

Following Vi to the cafe, they soon realize that their civilian attire puts them at a disadvantage, whereupon they reenlist in the corps, glorying in wearing the uniform again. They find that their old commander, Captain Blake, owns the cafe. He supposely has been dishonorably discharged from the marines. In reality, Blake is working with the intelligence department in an effort to capture the spy group to which Vi belongs.

The rivalry between the two devil-dogs leads to one side-splitting exploit after another, but reaches a climax when the pair observe Blake and Vi in a suspicious situation and blunder into it, ruining Blake's scheme to trap the spy ring. How they atone for their mistake, rounding up the spies in a mile-a-minute chase makes a side-splitting climax.

Binnie Barnes has the feminine lead as Vi. Paul Kelly enacts the role of Captain Blake, with Robert Smith and Dorothy Lovett as a romantic pair, and Franklin Pangborn also featured in the RKO Radio film. Mort Greene and Harry Revel wrote the picture's five songs, "Zana Zoranda," "Hands Across the Border," "Call Out the Marines," "The Light of My Life" and "Beware."

Old Hickory, General Andrew Jackson, lives again in "The Remarkable Andrew," as he steps out of history's pages in the person of Brian Donlevy, to help William Holden who is in love with Ellen Drew. They're all there—George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, Jesse James, Thomas Jefferson, and others you'll recognize Wednesday and Thursday at the Paramount.

"One extra plane...

. . . or extra tank, or extra gun, or extra ship completed tomorrow may, in a few months, turn the tide on some distant battlefield; it may make the difference between life and death for some of our fighting men."

—President Roosevelt,
February 23, 1942.

Would you be the one who failed to help buy that plane, tank or ship—by failing to buy your share of Bonds? Could you sleep nights knowing that American boys were being killed because you and others "put off" doing your part?

Remember, they are OUR boys now—from your State, your town, perhaps your very home. They're out there risking their lives—giving their lives—so that America, your free America, can live. And just as you are counting upon them to give everything they've got, so they are counting upon you to give everything you've got—by working harder than you ever have before and by investing in Bonds to the very limit of your powers!

Can they count on you? Make your answer ring clear and true—let our boys know that every man, woman, and child in America is behind them 100%! Go to your local post office, bank, savings and loan association, or other official sales agency today. Pledge yourself to buy all the Bonds you can—regularly, every pay day until this war is won! The more Bonds you buy, the more planes will fly.

ENLIST YOUR CURRENT SAVINGS FOR VICTORY

See in this table how your savings, set aside regularly by you—and by every American with an income—reach 10 billion dollars in just one year! Then make up your mind to pledge—not the least, but the MOST you can. By doing your part you'll be helping America produce the 60,000 planes, 45,000 tanks, 20,000 anti-aircraft guns and eight million tons of shipping we MUST HAVE this year to WIN! Remember, you can start buying Bonds by buying Stamps for as little as 10c and that you get a $25.00 (maturity value) Bond (Series E) for only $18.75.

Dearest Mother:

Just like Pop said, this army life's makin' a man out of me. Of course, Mom, I'm not the man Pop was when he was skirmishin' around with the old Rainbow Division. He used to tell me so much about it.

In this war we gotta be tough! I have to laugh when I think how Pop would look bouncing around in a jeep for a couple of hours. Or shooting one of those dandy little anti-tank rifles off his shoulder.

We're putting together a rip snorter this trip. They're doing everything to make us just about the best bunch of fightin' galoots you ever saw.

And that goes for what they do for us off duty, too! You should see the new clubhouse they got for us just outside camp. Got radios, dance floors, nice soft chairs . . . just about the nearest thing to home I ever saw. And you can get something to eat that won't cost you a month's pay too.

Now the army isn't running this. The USO's doing it. Most of the camps got clubs, too, because you and a lot of other folks dug down and gave the money to the USO last year.

But, you tell Pop for me, he knows what happened since then. Both of you have seen it right at home. Guys are just streaming into uniform. Why, last year there was less than two million of us. This year there'll be four million. The USO needs a lot of money to serve that many men.

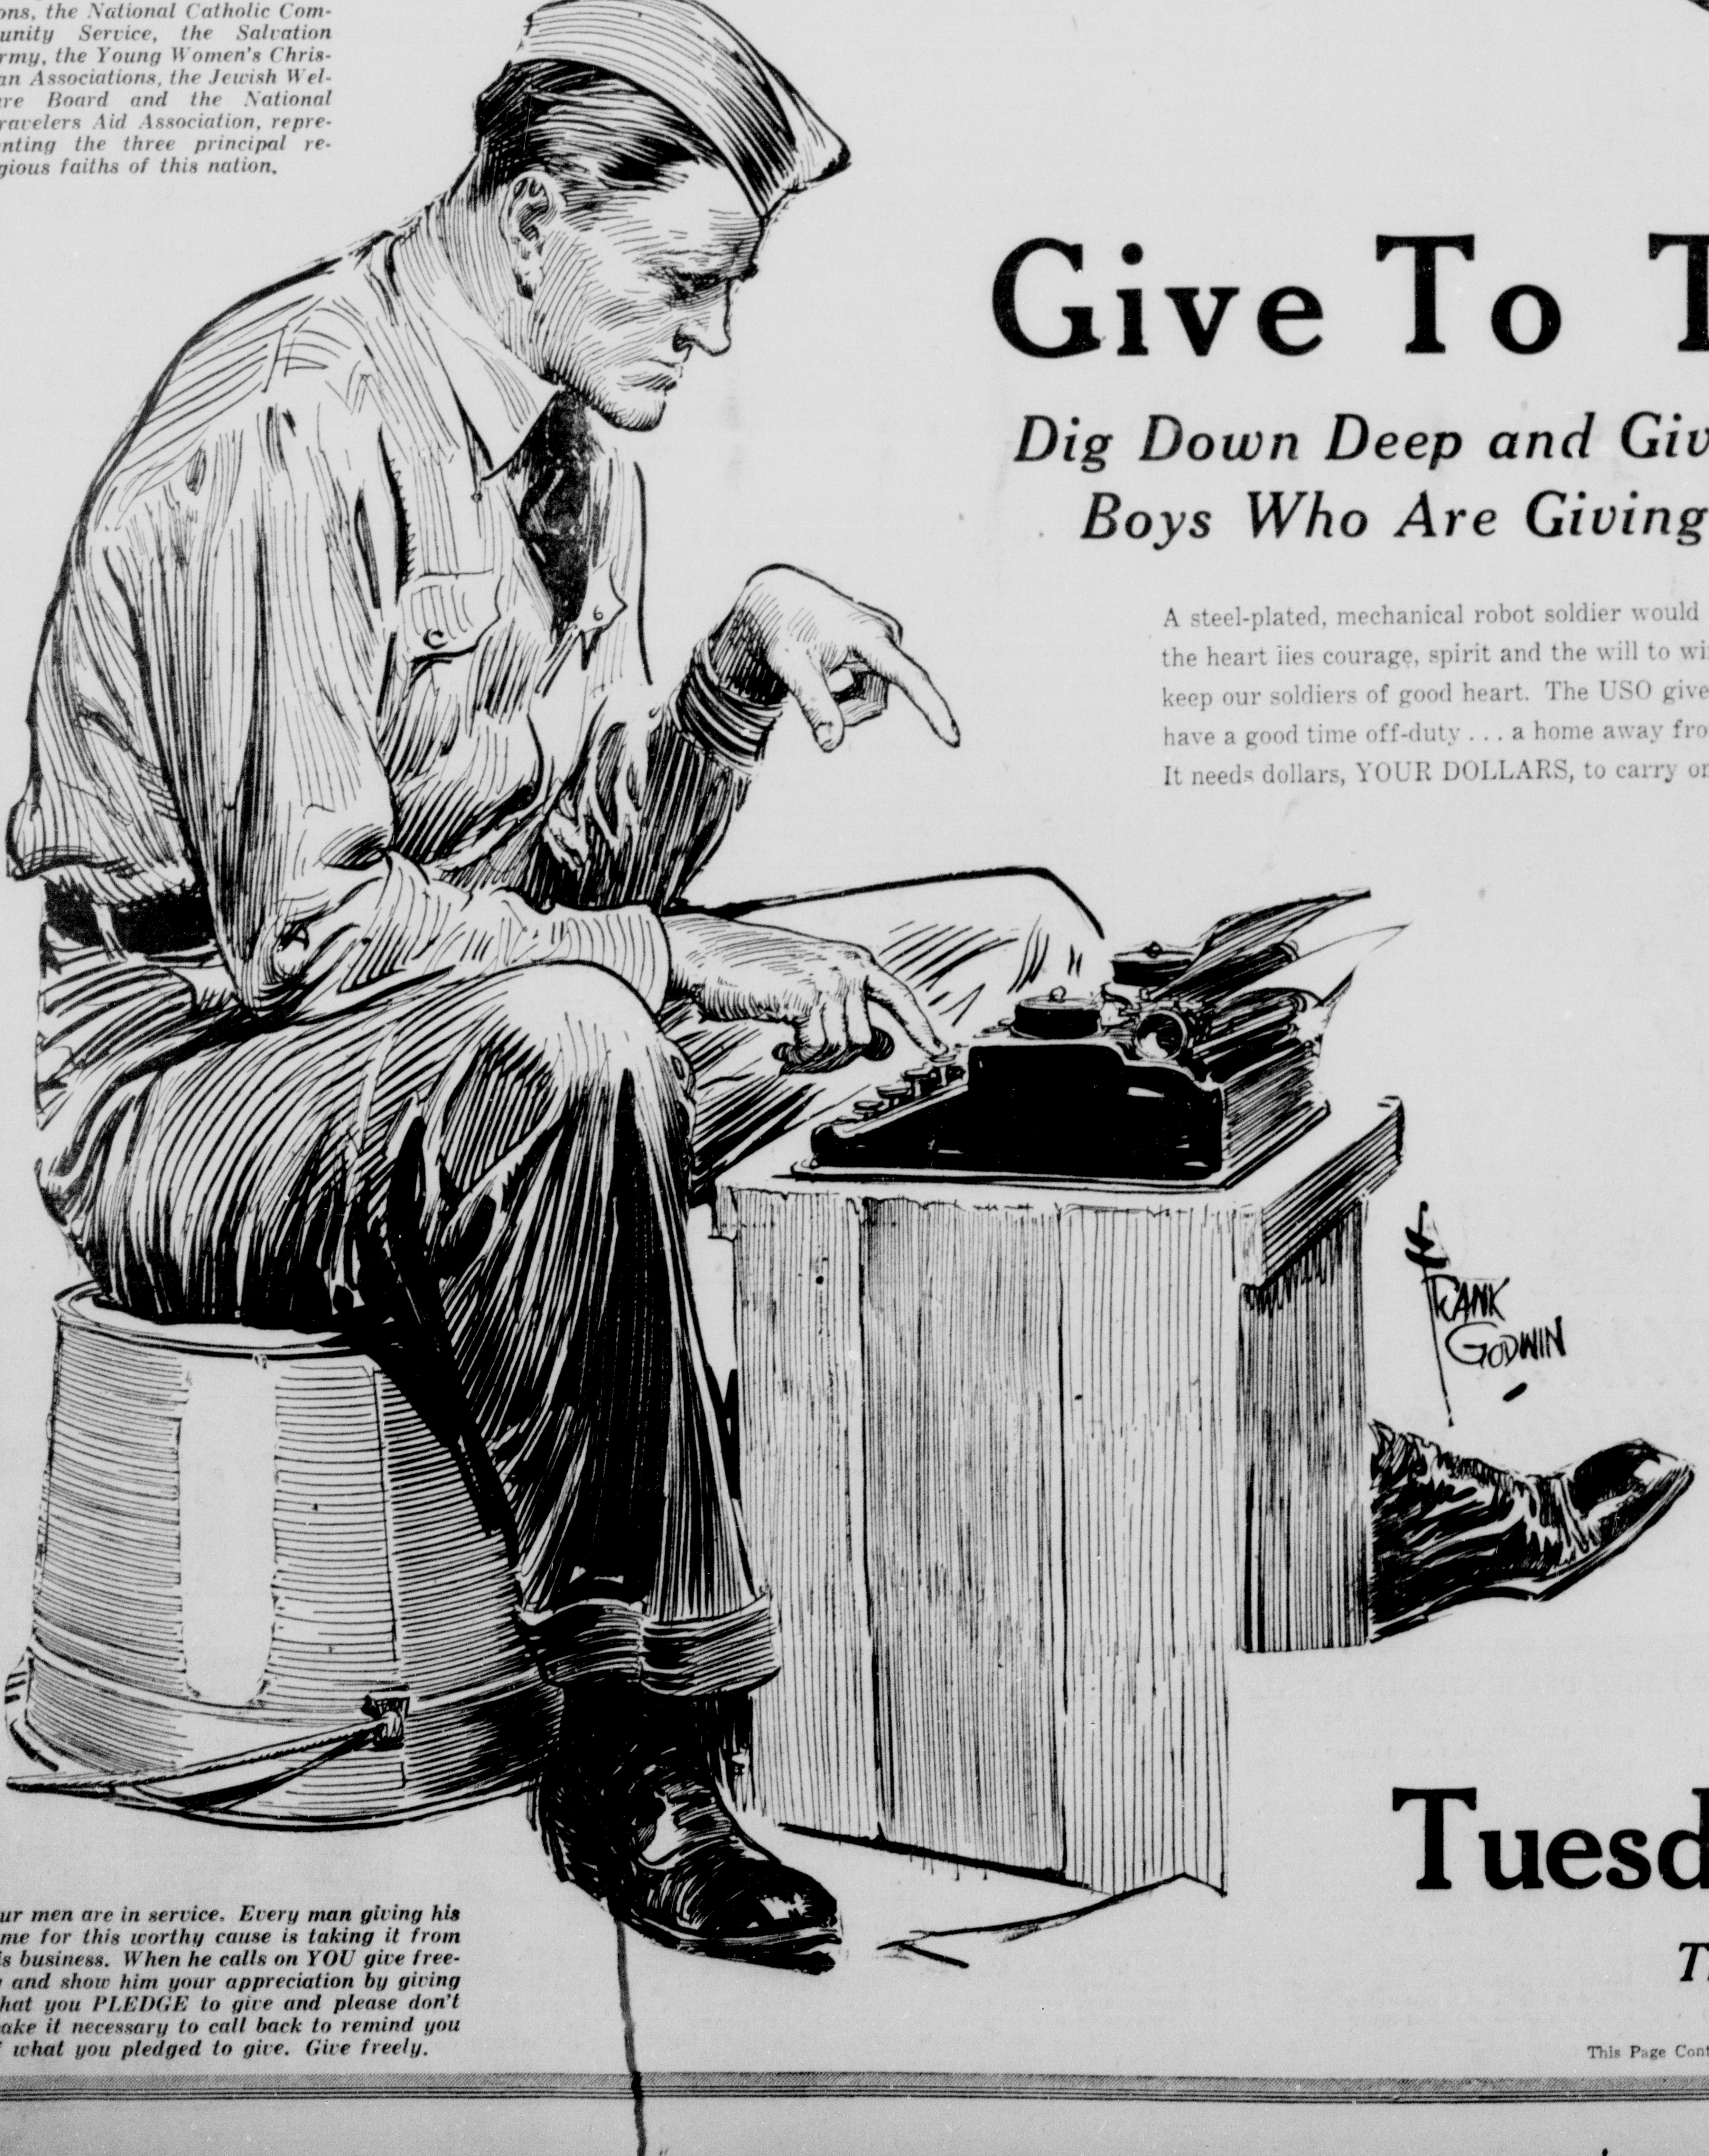
That's why the USO is setting out to raise more of it . . . around 32,000,000 bucks I hear. Now, I know you and Pop upped with what you could last time. But it would sure be swell if you could dig down in the old sock again. Maybe you could get some of the other folks around the town steamed up.

It will mean an awful lot Mother, to the fellows in Monroe and Ouachita parish with that new camp going in there. Sort of show 'em the home folks are right there backing 'em up. And tell Pop, I guess I don't have to tell an old soldier like him that's a mighty nice feeling for a fellow to have. So, see what you and Pop can do, huh, Mom?

Bill

Here Are the Agencies Behind the USO:

The six national agencies are the Young Men's Christian Associations, the National Catholic Community Service, the Salvation Army, the Young Women's Christian Associations, the Jewish Welfare Board and the National Travelers Aid Association, representing the three principal religious faiths of this nation.



Give To The USO

Dig Down Deep and Give All You Can to the Boys Who Are Giving Everything for Us

A steel-plated, mechanical robot soldier would be invincible, except for one thing: he has no heart. In the heart lies courage, spirit and the will to win. It is the job of the USO to nourish this spirit . . . to keep our soldiers of good heart. The USO gives men a place to go where they can relax, laugh and have a good time off-duty . . . a home away from home. That's why the USO is calling on you for help. It needs dollars, YOUR DOLLARS, to carry on . . . to help our soldiers win our war.

It's Our Challenge MONROE

Our Quota Is $13,600

Monroe's quota is $13,600. Tuesday, May 12th, the drive begins. EVERYONE should contribute and when you sign up to GIVE, GIVE PLENTY and carry through with your promise to give. Destroy loneliness, monotony, and boredom for OUR boys. Give "cheerfully" . . . GENEROUSLY!

The Drive Begins

Our men are in service. Every man giving his time for this worthy cause is taking it from his business. When he calls on YOU give freely and show him your appreciation by giving what you PLEDGE to give and please don't make it necessary to call back to remind you of what you pledged to give. Give freely.

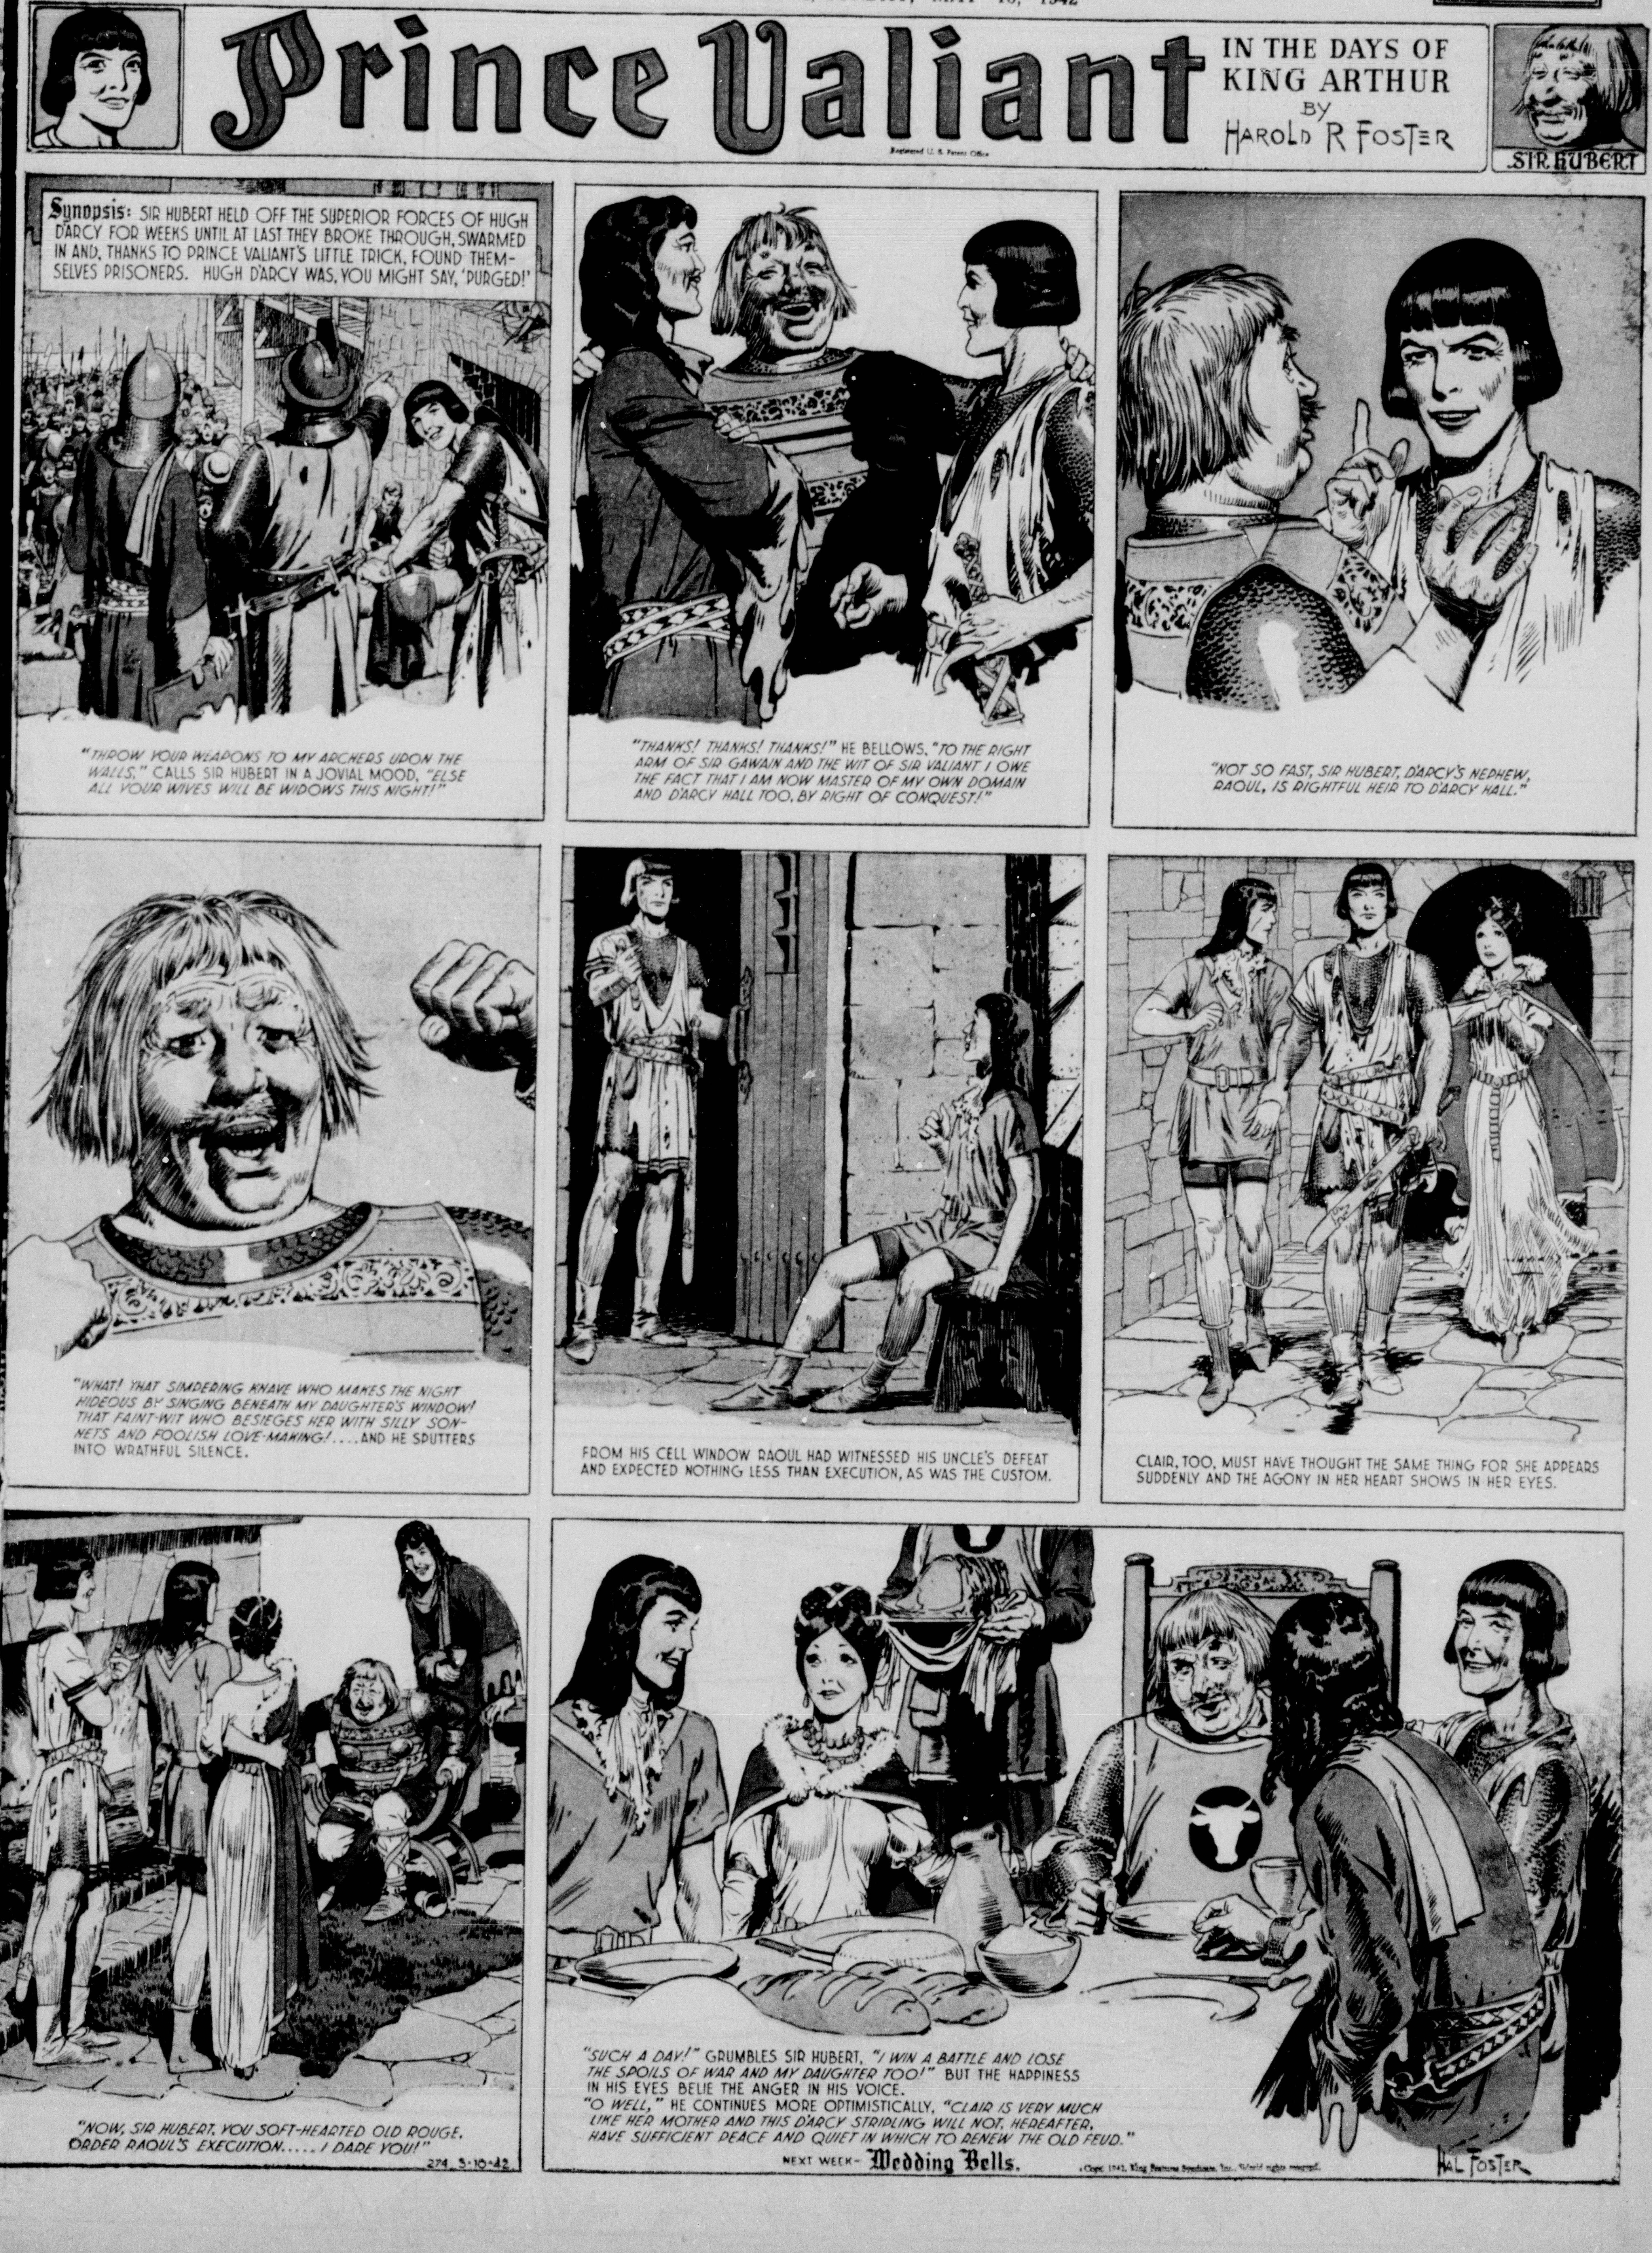
Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF
KING ARTHUR
BY
HAROLD R FOSTER



Synopsis: SIR HUBERT HELD OFF THE SUPERIOR FORCES OF HUGH D'ARCY FOR WEEKS UNTIL AT LAST THEY BROKE THROUGH, SWARMED IN AND, THANKS TO PRINCE VALIANT'S LITTLE TRICK, FOUND THEMSELVES PRISONERS. HUGH D'ARCY WAS, YOU MIGHT SAY, 'PURGED!'

"THROW YOUR WEAPONS TO MY ARCHERS UPON THE WALLS," CALLS SIR HUBERT IN A JOVIAL MOOD, "ELSE ALL YOUR WIVES WILL BE WIDOWS THIS NIGHT!"

"THANKS! THANKS! THANKS!" HE BELLOWS. "TO THE RIGHT ARM OF SIR GAWAIN AND THE WIT OF SIR VALIANT I OWE THE FACT THAT I AM NOW MASTER OF MY OWN DOMAIN AND D'ARCY HALL TOO, BY RIGHT OF CONQUEST!"

"NOT SO FAST, SIR HUBERT, D'ARCY'S NEPHEW, RAOUL, IS RIGHTFUL HEIR TO D'ARCY HALL."

"WHAT! THAT SIMPERING KNAVE WHO MAKES THE NIGHT HIDEOUS BY SINGING BENEATH MY DAUGHTER'S WINDOW! THAT FAINT-WIT WHO BESIEGES HER WITH SILLY SONNETS AND FOOLISH LOVE-MAKING! ....AND HE SPUTTERS INTO WRATHFUL SILENCE.

FROM HIS CELL WINDOW RAOUL HAD WITNESSED HIS UNCLE'S DEFEAT AND EXPECTED NOTHING LESS THAN EXECUTION, AS WAS THE CUSTOM.

CLAIR, TOO, MUST HAVE THOUGHT THE SAME THING FOR SHE APPEARS SUDDENLY AND THE AGONY IN HER HEART SHOWS IN HER EYES.

"NOW, SIR HUBERT, YOU SOFT-HEARTED OLD ROUGE. ORDER RAOUL'S EXECUTION..... I DARE YOU!"

"SUCH A DAY!" GRUMBLES SIR HUBERT, "I WIN A BATTLE AND LOSE THE SPOILS OF WAR AND MY DAUGHTER TOO!" BUT THE HAPPINESS IN HIS EYES BELIE THE ANGER IN HIS VOICE.
"O WELL," HE CONTINUES MORE OPTIMISTICALLY, "CLAIR IS VERY MUCH LIKE HER MOTHER AND THIS D'ARCY STRIPLING WILL NOT, HEREAFTER, HAVE SUFFICIENT PEACE AND QUIET IN WHICH TO RENEW THE OLD FEUD."

BRAZOR'S PALACE IS A BEEHIVE OF ACTIVITY, AS HE BROADCASTS A REWARD FOR THE RECAPTURE OF HIS PRISONERS---
GUARDSMEN SOON SHUT OFF EVERY AVENUE OF ESCAPE TO THE OUTER GATES---
BUT FLASH AND HIS FELLOW PRISONERS HEAD FOR BRAZOR'S QUARTERS, HOPING TO TRAP THE TRAITOR IN HIS DEN. THEY BURST IN WITH DRAWN GUNS---ONLY TO FIND THE SUITE EMPTY---
FLASH'S PLAN TO FORCE BRAZOR TO FREE HIM AND HIS COMPANIONS FAILS. HE STEPS OUT ONTO BRAZOR'S BALCONY AND LOOKS DOWN: "A THOUSAND-FOOT DROP!" HE MUTTERS. "BUT IT'S OUR ONLY CHANCE TO ESCAPE!"
WHILE ZARKOV AND CARAN BARRICADE THE DOOR, FLASH RIPS ALL AVAILABLE FABRICS AND HANGINGS INTO LONG, STRONG STRIPS. DALE AND DESIRA KNOT THE PIECES INTO A CRUDE ROPE---

BEFORE LONG, THERE IS A COMMOTION OUTSIDE OF THE DOOR--AND BRAZOR'S TRIUMPHANT EXCLAMATION, AS HE FINDS IT LOCKED AND BARRICADED---

"YOU'RE TRAPPED!" BELLOWS THE TRAITOR, "YOU HAVEN'T A CHANCE! SURRENDER QUIETLY-- OR TAKE THE CONSEQUENCES!"

DICK TRACY
by Chester Gould
SCENE: CLARKE VAN DYKE'S ROOM —
OH, MY SWEET, OUR PLOT TO DISCREDIT MY HUSBAND AND RAISE YOU TO STARDOM HAS TAKEN A DANGEROUS TURN!
IF ONLY MATRI HAD NOT BEEN KILLED!
THE MAGAZINE WITH YOUR NAME ON IT! THE CIGARETTE CASE! YOU CAN'T ESCAPE THEM!
YOU SAY TRACY SENT YOU UP HERE?
YES, HE'S WAITING IN A CAR DOWNSTAIRS NOW! HE THINKS I'M ON THE LEVEL ABOUT FINDING MY HUSBAND. HE DOESN'T KNOW I STILL LOVE YOU, AND THAT THIS IS ALL A PLOT TO MAKE YOU A STAR.
THEN HE SENT YOU HERE TO GET WHAT FURTHER EVIDENCE YOU COULD?
THAT'S RIGHT!
BUT, NOW WHAT CAN WE DO WITH HIM? HE'S STILL UNDER MATRI'S SPELL – AND MATRI IS DEAD!
IF HE LIVES, I'LL FACE A KIDNAP CHARGE. IF HE DIES, I'LL GO TO JAIL!
CLARKE, THERE'S BUT ONE THING TO DO. WE MUST GET RID OF HIM!
A HYPNOTIC SPELL LASTS BUT A LIMITED TIME AFTER THE POWER OF SUGGESTION CEASES! YOLLMAN MAY WAKE UP ANY MINUTE!
THEN WE MUST ACT FAST!
GO DOWNSTAIRS. TELL THE DETECTIVE YOU FOUND NO ONE HOME. CONTINUE YOUR PRETENSE AT GRIEF. I WILL TAKE CARE OF THINGS!
MEANWHILE, ACROSS THE COURT IN THE NEXT BUILDING —
AHA! MY HUNCH WAS RIGHT. SHE FELL INTO MY TRAP!
I MUST GET DOWNSTAIRS BEFORE SHE DOES!
THAT'S VERY ODD, THERE WAS NO ONE HOME!
IS THAT RIGHT? TOO BAD!

Tarzan
by EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS
THE MYSTERIOUS VALLEY
"STAND ASIDE. THAT ONE MUST DIE!" KALBAN MARTIUS CALLED TO THE GIANTS AS HE POINTED TOWARD TARZAN. ONE OF THE KOLOSANS WHISPERED TO ANOTHER: "IF THE STRANGER IS THE DWARF'S ENEMY, THEN HE IS OUR FRIEND."
"AWAY!" MARTIUS REPEATED; "OR I'LL KILL YOU AS I HAVE KILLED ALL WHO OPPOSE MY IRON WILL."
THE GIANTS MOVED ASIDE, FOR THEY FEARED THE THUNDERSTICK THAT SPOKE WITH DEADLY TONGUE OF FIRE.
TARZAN WAS RECOVERING FROM HIS DAZE. SUDDENLY HE SAW HIS PERIL.
THE APE-MAN SPRANG INTO THE TREE LIKE A FLASH OF LIGHTNING.
MARTIUS FIRED. BUT HE MISSED THE SWAYING FIGURE.
A MOMENT LATER TARZAN DROPPED DOWN AND DISARMED HIM. HE SHATTERED THE RIFLE AGAINST A TREE.
RELIEVED OF HIS POWER, THE TYRANT COWERED AND WHINED: "PLEASE DON'T KILL ME!"
"TARZAN DOES NOT SOIL HIS HANDS WITH THE BLOOD OF A JACKAL. GO!"
